CHRISTMAS CHEER.

How the Day was Observed in Colorado Springs.

Services at the Churches and Pleasures at the Institute.

A Clever Production of the "Mikado" by Local Talent.

Few people not even in a southern clime had the opportunity of spending Christmas in brighter sunlight or in a more exhilarating climate than did the residents of Colorado Springs. Parasols were numerous upon the streets and fans predominated at the "Mikado" matinee at the opera house. During the latter part of the morning and the greater part of the afternoon everyone who owned a conveyance or was lucky enough to procure one at a livery stable was out riding. Others took the benefit of the sun and climate in walking and the streets were crowded during the greater part of the day. In the morning many people attended the union services, also the services at Grace Episcopal church. Later there were many private dinners and in some instances afternoon and evening Christmas trees.

As is the custom in Colorado Springs many if not very near all of the business houses were closed, and Sunday hours were observed at the post office.

Below we give a report of the services at the churches and other observations of the day.

UNION SERVICE.

The union services at the Presbyterian church were very well attended and were very interesting. The following was the order of exercises:

Gloria	Chorus
Invocation	Rev. J. S. Black
Hymn	"Hark Hear the Herald Angels Sing"
Scripture Lesson	Rev. G. E. Merrill
Solo	Mrs. Meyers
Prayer	Rev. G. N. Zeldridge
Hymn	"O Come All ye Faithful"
Sermon	Rev. J. S. Black
Solo	Mrs. Merrill
Hymn	"Joy to the World the Lord is Come"
Benediction	Rev. J. N. Gregg

The sermon by Mr. Black was substantially as follows:

"But thou Bethlehem Ephratah, which art little to be among the thousands of Judah, out of thee shall one come forth unto me that is to be ruler in Israel, whose goings forth are from of old, from everlasting."—Micah 5:2 (Revised version.)

Let us now go even unto Bethlehem—Luke 2:15.

This is Christmas day. Why do we have this service? The position of God's word is quite clear. Not the only day which we are definitely and expressly commanded to observe is the day of rest, the holy Sabbath. But we have both example and precept in favor of the propriety of fasts and feasts, of special seasons of humiliation and of rejoicing. We have our national anniversaries and our family birthdays, and it is safe, expedient and profitable to have our religious remembrance days.

Nor let us be too ready to condemn the heroic fathers and founders of some of the great divisions of Protestantism, if they came to the conclusion that the best thing they could do was to abolish the observance of Christmas. Any one who studies the history of the church previous to the Reformation learns that this season of the year had degenerated from a holy and cheerful festival into a time of the wildest debauchery, and profane caricaturing of the solemnities of religion. It was simply a question as to which was the more expedient course, abolition or reformation, and they chose the former course.

Then there was the refined custom in more than one denomination to bury the dead with quiet solemnity, but without any service. Why? The people were but newly out of home, and it was impossible to have a service without the more ignorant drifting into prayers for the dead, and the shadow of purgatory. When the need for this hard and unfeeling condition of things passed away appropriate services marked the burial of the dead. So now we can have Christmas without profanity and without buffoonery.

In our motherlands, whether in England, Scotland or Germany, it is a peculiarly festive season, and by common consent it has been made in an especial degree the children's festival, for on this day the Lord of glory became a little child for the sake of our redemption.

The Latin hymns of the nativity have been translated into English and German and some of the songs of the pious souls of long ago are the sweetest Christmas carols of to-day. Much of our most general literature gathers round this Christmas time. The best work that Charles Dickens did, so far as ultimate social value is concerned, was in his delightful Christmas stories, in which charity, forgiveness, reconciliation and loving kindness are so powerfully inculcated. But before Dickens, our own Washington Irving had glorified the English Christmas in his "Sketch Book." We cannot realize how much literature, sacred and secular, gathers round the manger at Bethlehem. The incarnation is the central mystery of our most holy religion. Gran[illegible] and all the rest is plain even when most marvelous. God man—the temptation, the transfiguration, the cross, the grave, the resurrection, the ascension are all very wonderful, but natural while wonderful.

Here follow quotations from the Christmas carols of the Latin writers. The carols are singularly beautiful and were finely read by Mr. Black who here and there gave a[illegible] commentary.

These writers of the hymns of the nativity, ancient and modern, have given voice to the thought and heart of the church concerning the mystery.

On a pleasant morning in the late September I went from Jerusalem to Bethlehem. It is but a short journey, Bethlehem being six miles south of Jerusalem on the road to Hebron. Your mule being a type of all women in his sense would be called a mule. It is the place of Zebulon. To the west the ancient [illegible] while on the east are [illegible] down, 1500 feet below we see the Dead Sea. In the distance you see the mass of the mountains of Moab. Down close beyond, perhaps five miles off, rise three convents belonging to the Greek, Latin and Armenian churches.

Outside of Jerusalem there are no houses in Bethlehem, and the convents devote themselves to hospitality. This is the home of Latin and Greek convents. Poor pilgrims of their own faith are entertained free and believe are somewhere near the way. Even to the ordinary traveler no charge is made although the gifts to the convent funds is usually quite equivalent to the ordinary hotel.

We put ourselves in charge of the Latin monks. The monks in these oriental convents are sometimes very ignorant, but they are usually kind and attentive. Our first care in the convent of the Nativity was to partake of the hospitable meal to which we were invited. There were only four at the table but the accidental gathering symbolized the way in which the ends of the earth go to Bethlehem. The Dragoman, an interpreter of the French consul, and a cunning looking old Arab he was, sat opposite to me. On one side was my own guide, a Hungarian Jew, and on the other a captain in the Turkish army. We were served by an Italian monk. Five nations, tongues and creeds, four religions in this small group. Palestine is holy ground to Mohammedans. Jerusalem is in sanctity next to Mecca and Medina. Mohammed is farther Abraham to the Arab as really and truly as he is to the Jew.

The associations of Bethlehem are very touching. Here Rachel died. This was the home of Naomi. Ruth was a gleaner in those fields. Rachel, Naomi, Ruth, Mary, four worthy names. In the Christian era this spot is memorable not only for the pious care of Helena, but also as being the home of the venerable Jerome while he was translating the scriptures into Latin. Here David was a shepherd lad, and this spring on the hillside is that where he often quenched his thirst, the spring for which he longed in later and sadder years, but which, when brought to him he poured out before the Lord, for men had risked their lives for it.

To the Christian whose memory is not stirred and whose heart is not moved by a visit to Bethlehem.

"A small cool stream from the convent into the church proper. A descent of a few steps leads to the exact spot of the grotto, opposite which is the place of the manger, now an altar where lamps are ever burning. On either side of the exact spot where the Prince of Peace made its advent, one on either earth stands a Turkish soldier armed from head to toe, for the Greek and Latin monks are every now and again breaking each others heads over this very spot. Where wise men laid their gifts, poured forth their adoration, these monks and brotherhoods of the church have fought to the death in unseemly brawls. Hence this is one way to favor the Latins, Russia puts another to favor the Greeks, and the poor sublime porte is kept in hot water between the two, and Mohamedan soldiers keep the peace between Christians. And yet it was and is the Prince of Peace, and the discord and the tumult are only possible where He is not known. On earth peace. Let us pray for it. For the union of the several branches of His church, for the turning of the sword into the plowshare, of the spear into the pruning hook.

Nearer to Christ and nearer to each other. Let the spirit of our service keep our hearts and minds, asking with us for one is our master even Christ and all we are brethren.

Rev. J. N. Gregg in a few concise remarks presented the claims of the free reading room for which a collection was taken amounting to $38.65.

GRACE CHURCH.

The Grace church was elaborately and beautifully decorated for the special Christmas services held there on Friday. The new choir composed of Miss Fannie Axten, Mrs. Taylor, and Messrs. Franklin and Durkee, rendered in a particularly acceptable manner the following musical service:

"From the Rising of the Sun," by Perkins; "Venite," by Langdon; "Gloria Patri," by Boyce; "Te Deum," by Wright; "Benedictus Es," by Millard; "Gloria Tibi," by Mendelssohn. Hymn—"Shout the Glad Tidings," "Adeste Fideles." Offertory "Holy Night," "Gloria in Excelsis," old chant.

Rev. A. R. Kieffer conducted the services and his text was taken from Proverbs xxv, verse xxv, "Good News from a Far Country."

For lack of space we are only able to give extracts of the sermon.

"Many years ago, in a land far away across the waters, in Bethlehem of Judea, a child was born on Christmas day who was the desire of all nations and the Savior of the world. The news we have received from that country is good news; that God condescended to our low estate, that while we were sinners He loved us, not deserving, or cause us to our destruction, but came to be a Savior from our sins.

We are wont to celebrate the anniversaries of important events and important men. How much more should we celebrate the anniversary of the advent of Him who came as the Savior of mankind.

Christ is the sun, which rising in the east has gladdened the whole earth and lighted up its pathway with its own splendor. In Christ our hope the good news of this birth in a far country comes to us this day. He who was born the King of the Jews is the sovereign of the world. The good news was not limited to the Jews, but was good news for all nations, a revelation to every man of every nation, of the fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man. The extension of race and country disposes, even distance variables, space annihilated, the far country is far away, we are now in Bethlehem, and with the shepherds we have come to the good news and unto us is born a Savior which is Christ the Lord, and with them we now stand wonder over the story which [illegible] the angels.

Christmas becomes to the believer an [illegible] in a Christian life. It introduces [illegible] to the Redeemer, they introduces [illegible] and [illegible] the gifts of the Wise Men and [illegible] to the Redeemer, God manifest in the flesh. It may be said the beginnings of Christmas were laid for a Christian people in days to the poor. Sweetness to the rejoicing, the discomfort of this season, which has spread through the world has arisen to relieve, and the joy of Christmas comes to us, the Sun, the Redeemer, the Savior appears, to bestow the blessings of the season. Good news for all country, for all ages, for the good news came from heaven of by the angels. It came from heaven, where there is no longer the fear which formerly was, but in heaven's joy the good news has come very near to, aye, even to one with us earth, so that as we are in communion there is no distance between us. Earth is round with our mirth. To the earth God is the ever near, and [illegible] the angels, [illegible] years ago [illegible] by contact with evil, and [illegible] to angels, [illegible] and [illegible] the love of God becomes Christ, the angels sing, [illegible] a special [illegible] heaven's joy country. [illegible] the human race. Humanity when it was young, in its primeval innocence, was very near to God, the angels were nearer, heaven lay all around him.

We worship in church to day and in this worship become more [illegible] and [illegible] heaven. The church is the one place worship to rule [illegible] day and at all times. The observance of the day once a year helps to keep this spirit from dying out of our hearts, and keeps it in power throughout the year. Would that we always kept so close to the place of Bethlehem. In the beautiful hymn of Luther "All creatures, earth, joy of life make thee a new sort of [illegible] within my heart, that it may be a quiet chamber kept for Thee." It is good then to keep the feast of the nativity, to enter its courts with praise and to make our homes ring with the same glory of the Lord which shines in its sanctuary.

The blessed influence of this holy season sweetens life and freshens home joys and quickens the pulses of human sympathy towards the poor and needy. It draws man to man as brother to brother, and impresses so deeply with the sanctifying conviction that, after all, all the people and the gospel alone, the "Good News that there is a Savior, Christ the Lord, that can answer the wants of mankind."

The manger and the cross, and Jesus in the midst of them, the abiding glory, always transfigured before us, the same Jesus in the swaddling clothes, or on the mount or in the purple robes.

The incarnation and the [illegible] of the atonement must lend in every true conception of the Messiah and the Lamb of God the poetic margins with the fragrance of aspiration, out of the treasures of the desert. Thus in the comprehension of the character of our Savior. My friend, if you can [illegible] your savior, let him save you. If not, why come him to day as the world's salvation, but not to receive him in your heart as your own Redeemer, else you have no real interest in the good news that came from the far country.

AT THE DEAF MUTE INSTITUTE.

On Christmas eve the children of the Deaf Mute Institute were offered a genuine holiday treat. The Christmas tree, a large one, was well loaded down with presents, and none of the pupils were overlooked. No general invitation was given to the public to attend the entertainment from the fact that there was not room to accommodate them. There were, however, a large number of people present, including the members of the board and their families and many of the friends of the instructors and pupils. There was no regular programme arranged. Mr. Dudley, the superintendent, made a short and appropriate address, which was interpreted to the children by the matron, Mrs. Wilcomb. The distribution of presents followed, and the information of the one represented the gifts handed them even more than did the many little children at the different churches on Christmas eve. While some were not able to see what they received, they could feel, and the others who could neither speak nor hear, could see.

During the evening the following preamble and resolutions were adopted:

WHEREAS, The Christmas through which we have just passed has been the most joyous occasion of the kind we have ever experienced; and

WHEREAS, The pleasure has been largely the result of gifts from kind and generous friends; therefore

Resolved, That we hold in grateful remembrance and extend our hearty thanks to the following contributors: The board of trustees, for a contribution of $[illegible]; to a prominent gentleman of the city for $25 cheek; to the lady wife of the same gentleman for a Christmas letter to each pupil, officer and teacher in our household; to an unknown lady friend, for 20 yards of Williamson's ribbons; to Captain A. D. DeCourcey, for 50 boxes of candy and bon bons; to several friends, $2 in cash; to Messrs. George Bros., for $5; to Messrs. Stein & Co., for 25 pounds of choice nuts; to Miss McDonald, for a large roasted pig; to Messrs. Axten & Young, for 25 pounds of candy; to Mr. A. Brown, for a handsome secure lime and drawing material; to Mr. Geo. S. Perry, for $5; to Messrs. Barnes & Son, for knives for all the boys and scissors for the girls; to Mr. A. D. Taylor, for cozy corners of geraniums; to Mr. D. Hardy, for a dozen [illegible]; to Messrs. Morton, Gale and other unknown friends, for [illegible] each; to [illegible], for [illegible] pieces of presents; to Mr. Nye, for a [illegible] in the house of the Manitou Cabinet afternoon and a handsome box of candy to each pupil.

Resolved, That the GAZETTE be [illegible] to be requested to publish these resolutions.

"THE MIKADO."

Two very clever performances of "The Mikado" were given at the opera house on Christmas afternoon and evening by local talent, under the direction of Mrs. Agnes Andrews. Considering the time was so short the production reflected great credit upon the performers, the opera was excellently well presented, the music rendered in a manner which [illegible] the Savoy operas [illegible] some weeks ago. The [illegible] were in good taste and [illegible] while the play went very smoothly, especially in the evening. As a whole it was one of the most enjoyable amusements given the people of Colorado Springs. Mr. Barnes was given the part of Ko-Ko, Pooh-Bah, Mrs. Barnes made a sweet little Yum-Yum, Pitti-Sing, Nanki-Poo, Katisha, Pish-Tush, Nanki-Poo, Yum-Yum, Pitti-Sing, Katisha, Pish-Tush, Ko-Ko, Mr. Johnson, Mr. Axten, Mr. Young, Mr. Durkee, Mr. Axten, Mr. Johnson, Mr. Durkee, Mr. Young. The chorus, while not very strong, showed careful training. Miss Zella Coombs, the pianist, deserves much credit for the manner in which she directed the singers through. From the lack of our columns the crowded morning we are unable to give the performance the extended notice that it deserves.

THE ARTHERS.

At the Arthers on Friday the guests were provided with the most elaborate Christmas dinner ever served in Colorado Springs. The dining room had been nicely decorated for the occasion, and upon entering the main door a large motto, on which were the words "Merry Christmas," attracted the attention of every one. Many of the tables were very handsomely arranged. Below we give the menu of fare served:

Marine Disasters.

GLOUCESTER, Mass., December 26.—The schooner Nellie G. Thurston, from the Grand Banks, reports the loss of three of the crew of the schooner Lizzie Grafton by capsizing in a dory. Their names were Wm. Cummings, Geo. [illegible] and Louis Barnes.

PROVIDENCE, December 26.—The Point Judith life saving crew put out in their life boat yesterday for the scene of the collision between the schooner White Fox and an unknown vessel, and has not yet returned. A northeast gale prevailed yesterday and to-day, with snow flurries and a dense weather this morning. A dispatch from Point Judith says it is supposed the crew reached Block Island this morning. The government cutter is Block Island is inoperative, and their fate cannot be certainly known until the steamer can get through to Newport.

WASHINGTON, December 26.—General Superintendent Kimball, of the life saving service, and Assistant Superintendent Walters are at Newport, R. I., to have the revenue marine steamer Dexter ready to proceed to Block Island and vicinity to search for the missing Point Judith life saving crew.

PENSACOLA, December 16.—The row boat Lizzie exploded a torpedo this morning killing the engineer, Wm. Hall, and the colored fireman, J. C. Peterson, a passenger, threw the captain and deck hand overboard and then jumped into the water and saved them, although he was badly scalded himself.

CHICAGO, December 16.—A dispatch from Sault Ste. Marie says the Owen has returned to that port from a search of the Orono Bay among the islands north of Drummond's Point. No trace of the vessel was found.

VICTORIA, B. C., December 29.—Last night during the prevalence of a heavy fog the British bark Langdale, under charter for Australia, while in tow of the tug Pilot went ashore on the rocks of Trial Island, a few miles from this port. In the efforts to get clear of the Pilot, was also stranded. Both vessels remain hard and fast. Steamers have gone to their assistance. Their position is a perilous one in a southeast wind springing up, as a heavy surf breaks on the rocks where the vessels lie.

Wreckers in Africa.

WASHINGTON, December 26.—Secretary Manning received the following dispatch from Senator Fair, dated San Francisco: "The American bark [illegible], from Port Pirie, Australia, for Queenstown, has been ashore on Jones reef, off the coast of Africa, and has been left by the crew from the Indian ocean. The last ship to arrive there was the Cown to Bearing Sea. The American ensign on board a crew of women, and it has been left by the pass is down the crew may have gone in there on some of the islands in Bering sea, which lies, which assistance is needed immediately, they will freeze to death. Promptly on receipt of the dispatch at the security department were sent instructions to the officers of the revenue cutter at San Francisco [illegible] to the Jones reef. The cutter has not yet been received. LEADVILLE NOTES.

The Recent Strike in the Mines of Leadville.

The Difference of Opinion Supposed to Be Greater Than Is Found to Be.

Stephen Lemon's Idea of a Mining Boom in the Future.

LEADVILLE, December 27, '85.

To the Editor of the Gazette.

The truth is good enough for Leadville. So far as her standing as a mining camp is concerned she needs only to refer to her record. At no time during the past four years has her stability been so well assured. She needs no mining boom—she was long ago out of swaddling clothes. What, then, means this fairy tale of a wonderful strike in the Mad of Iron? Whose interests are to be subserved by such egregious exaggerations as are now flaring over the land on the wings of the press? The owners of this property are mostly men of national repute. If many men, the bursting of a gaudy bubble, reflects to the glaring face of the mountains, will cause them only horrification and chagrin. If mercenary men, they ought to be wise enough to know that the successful methods of '79 will not be the successful methods of '86. The mining scores of the old booming days are not yet healed, nor are the brigands all forgotten. The riches and splendors of the imagination will no longer give a fictitious value to mining stocks. The day has come when performance, not promise, must create market values. Certainly no legitimate purpose of the owners is served in the halo of glory now surrounding the lead of the Mad.

Again, wherein is Leadville to be benefited by a return to the methods of '79? She has her share of pyrotechnical mining in those days when the credulity of the nation was hungry for a feast. The rockets went up in a blaze of glory and the sticks came down upon the innocent heads of a great public throughout the land. Those heads have been sore ever since. A new generation has not had time to grow up. In any event the boys will see the sore heads of their fathers and will take warning. In those booming days of '79, the truth would have been good enough for Leadville, as it is good enough to-day. Every gorgeous lie was fitted a boomerang which afterward returned to retard the progress of the camp. Had only the truth been told, there would have been no slaughter of the innocents and the mining industry would have maintained its true position as a legitimate business calling. It is almost marvelous that this camp has been able to do this own in spite of the wreckers of '79. Only its inherent merits and the unconquerable faith and energy of its mining men, have saved it from retrogression. Left largely to its own resources, deprived of the foreign capital that would have come so much to hasten development, it has nevertheless continued to fight valiantly for success under difficulties. It has maintained its position, and more recently has been carrying point after point with renewed energy and enthusiasm. But, now, just as a legitimate restoration of confidence is beginning to manifest itself in the east, this monster of exaggeration puts in its baleful presence and attempts to repeat the boomerang tactics of '79. No friend of Leadville or of Colorado will further the covert and insecurable purpose of this needless hurrah.

What is the truth about the discovery in the lead of Iron mine? A shaft has penetrated an ore body which is probably worth twenty dollars per ton, to a depth of thirty-seven feet or more. Nothing further is yet known about this ore body; no drifts have been run to determine its length or breadth. It may be twenty, fifty or one hundred feet wide and one, two or three hundred feet long. Nobody knows. Yet this fairy development work in a low grade ore body is made the foundation for marvelous stories of exhaustless treasures. Statesmen are congratulated because of even a limited ownership, as though glittering millions were already within their grasp; interviews upon the wonderful event are published broadcast, and the whole press of the country is called into service to signalize the "magnificent discovery." It is a day of '79 injected into the decade of '85. It is terribly and disgreatly natural. When it is remembered that discoveries of far greater importance have been of frequent occurrence in Leadville during the past two years, and that they have become so largely mere matters of course as to excite no very special comment, the assurety are of dullness of the sudden beating of tom-toms and kettle-drums becomes glaringly apparent. Mining men here have a very clearly substantial conviction that the universe is so covered with scissors on the stock boards. It is to be hoped that the supposed greatness. A forty-seven foot ore in a body of low grade ore in Leadville would furnish a very shaky foundation for a stock boom in [illegible]. We do not, as a rule, say in Leadville, figure on ore bodies by the acre. The biggest was overdone in '79. We know now we paid the extreme value of our experience in deposits to count more beyond our development work. Our [illegible] rests on the [illegible] with unvarying kindness and grace. On the contrary, their convolutions are often so intricate, their values so uncertain and their fickleness of position and magnitude so recurrent, that our prospect work results largely in surprises or disappointments. We sometimes find by rule, often through local indications outside of rule, and not infrequently by the merest chance and when we least expected. Even when discovered, we can only estimate the extent of an ore body as we pass through it. Ten feet away, the treasure may disappear like the fragments of a dream. What wrecks of hopes, then, to build a castle on so precious a foundation? Mr. Leadville wishes well to the land, but Mr. Leadville wishes the land to conduct herself with becoming modesty and decorum.

J. H. LOOMIS.

Importers' Complaints.

NEW YORK, December 28.—Mr. S. D. Phelps of this city, well known in connection with the commercial interests of the country, has submitted to President Cleveland a series of formal charges against Mr. Geo. V. Brower, appointed by the president to be general appraiser at this port, who as a recess appointee has been filling that office and whose confirmation now rests with the senate. The matter is made public in a formal way to day. Mr. Phelps' charges against Mr. Brower, stripped of their formalities, are as follows:

First, disregard of the law in accepting as conclusive in cases of reappraisement testimony in the form of invoices and affidavits furnished by importers, in contravention of section 2902 of the revised statutes; in the case of the Schelhammer invoice of [illegible] in refusing testimony of domestic manufacturers in contravention of section 9 of the act of March 3, 1883.

Second, neglect of duty. This charge is based on a number of subdivisions. The chief points are that Mr. Brower does not appear at his office more than four days per week on an average; that on these days his office hours have been from 11 a. m. to 3 p. m.; that this shortness of hours and irregularity of attendance has caused importers much trouble and loss of valuable time; that in the case of Schelhammer & Co., through carelessness or otherwise, some of the government's most important witnesses were not properly notified to appear; that the general appraiser has been in the habit of considering large numbers of wholly dissimilar cases under one hearing, passing upon one and then disposing of the others on the basis thus established; that he has by neglect in official correspondence important letters addressed to him in October and November remaining unanswered, and the subject matter of the correspondence unacted on.

Third, incompetency, as shown in the Schelhammer case, and in the case of an importation of glucose, wherein said general appraiser was not able to comprehend the meaning either of consular reports as to the value of such merchandise or to understand the meaning of wholesale prices of such merchandise in the principal markets of Germany, the country from whence exported; and finally that said general appraiser is not sufficiently familiar with the ordinary courtesies and rules governing official or other correspondence between officers of the government and business men dealing with his office. In evidence of this last averment Mr. Phelps refers to correspondence between himself and Mr. Brower.

Burlington Extension.

LINCOLN, December 28.—It is reported here that the Burlington company has projected two new extensions in Nebraska and will pushed construction rapidly, one next season to the northwest of Lincoln and Grand Island branch. This will make an entrance into a new field for that company, as up to the present time its operations have been confined almost exclusively to territory on the South Platte river. This branch will be extended at once as far as Broken Bow, in Custer county, a distance of over one hundred miles. This will bring a large portion of North Platte county into direct communication with the state capital. Another extension to be made at once is from Tobias west toward Blue Hill. Actual construction of these lines is to commence as soon as possible. The Burlington has now prospected nearly 250 miles of new road in Nebraska alone.

Wabash Affairs.

ST. LOUIS, December 28.—The master's report in the Wabash case, looking to a final decree of foreclosure and sale, will be presented in the United States circuit court next Monday. The master reports outstanding certificates of the receivers and interest amounting to $1,324,414.11, and floating indebtedness amounting to $1,237,480.67. The gross amount of undetermined liabilities is placed at $776,000, but it is expected that this amount will be reduced 60 per cent. The sale will probably take place early in March.

Grain in Sight.

CHICAGO, December 28.—The following figures taken from a statement compiled by the secretary of the board of trade to be posted on 'change to-morrow show the amount of grain in sight in the United States and Canada on Saturday, December 26th, and the amount of increase or decrease from the preceding week: "Wheat, 55,300,976 bushels, decrease 67,495 bushels; corn 7,064,886 bushels, decrease 1,859,227; oats 2,584,818 bushels, increase 144,754; rye 867,028 bushels, increase 57,871; barley 2,243,776 bushels, increase 45,702. The amount in store in Chicago elevators at the same time was: "Wheat, 14,454,855; corn 1,942,998; oats 252,453; rye 249,377; barley 223,273.

Church Desecration.

CHICAGO, December 28.—The police turned up details of an extraordinary piece of vandalism, occurring in St. Elizabeth's Roman Catholic church, corner of Sixty-first and Thirty-first streets. Unknown persons entered the church several nights ago, broke down and completely smashed sixteen oil paintings which had been on the walls, tore some figures in the stations, went to the sanctuary, threw the vestments around, spilled wine and poured over them and did much other damage.

Denver's Church Trouble.

DETROIT, December 29.—No trouble has arisen among the Roman Polish to-day. Early this morning a crowd assembled upon the church but no entrance could be gained. Father Kolasski, the deposed priest, proposed to enter the church [illegible] [illegible]

THE OLD YEAR.

Census.

Last year a census of the state was taken which gives some interesting facts regarding our growth and we will begin our review of the state by giving a condensed statement of the results of the census.

POPULATION.

It is impossible to make any elaborate comparisons of census reports because our settlement has been so recent. The census of 1850 did not mention Colorado. The census of 1860 gives no details, but gives the population of the territory of Colorado at 34,277. There were probably no county organizations at that time. During the period from 1860 to 1870 Colorado did not grow much. In 1870 the population was 39,864, or a net increase in the ten years of 5,587, or only 16 per cent. The next ten years showed an immense increase. In 1880 the census showed a population of 194,327, or an increase of 154,463 or 388 per cent. The decade of 1870-80 shows a rate of increase of population twenty-four times that in the decade of 1860-70. The explanation is simple. In the decade 1870-80 we had railroads and in the preceding decade we had not. Colorado depends more upon railroads for its development than most states. It consisted for years of mining camps which shipped in everything that was consumed and shipped out every thing that was produced. For this reason transportation has been an important factor in our development. The period from 1860-70 was one of comparative stagnation. The immigration was large in the very beginning which accounts for the population in 1860 being nearly as great as in 1870. There was probably a large falling off in population between these two years. Neither mining nor agriculture was on a good basis during the first decade and much capital was lost in crude experiments. But the town of Greeley taught us the possibilities of irrigation while the Boston and Colorado Smelting company put an end to unsuccessful experiments in treating ores and gave a sure market to the miner for his ores.

In giving the census for 1885 of the population by counties we will make comparisons with the census of 1880 and 1870. The population by counties is as follows:

During the past five years the increase in population is 49,583, or 25.56 per cent. This increase is not as large as in the decade 1870-80, but our growth since has been more gradual. At this rate our increase for the decade 1880-90 will be 57 per cent. This is large by in excess of the rate of the growth in the United States, which is from 30 to 35 per cent every ten years. The death rate seems to be the least of any state in the union. Taking the death rate in states which are considered sanitariums, we have the following results: The number of deaths per thousand in Colorado in the census year, 1885, was nine. The number of deaths per thousand for the census year 1880 was as follows in the following states:

Florida	12
California	14
Kansas	15
North Carolina	16

TOWNS AND CITIES.

There are 268 towns and cities in the state. The following table shows the population in excess of the 4000 towns:

It is impossible to make comparisons with previous years because the censuses of 1870 and 1880 show only the population of towns and cities of over 4000 inhabitants. As a result only the population of Denver was given in 1870. Denver had then 4759 inhabitants. In 1880 only four cities had over 4000 inhabitants. The comparison of population of 1870 with 1880 is as follows:

	1880	1885
Colorado Springs	4,226	4,583
Denver	35,629	54,708
Leadville	14,820	10,525
Silver Cliff	5,140	900

From the above only Colorado Springs and Denver of the towns of 4,000 inhabitants in 1880 have continued to grow. Both Pueblo and South Pueblo have grown in the past five years so as to get into the 4,000 list. But these are the only cities, while Silver Cliff has dropped out. This gives us only five cities in 1885 of over 4,000 inhabitants.

POPULATION CLASSIFIED.

Indians living on reservations are not included in this classification. The population by races in 1870 and 1885 is as follows:

	1885	1870
White	240,385	191,126
Colored	1,617	2,446
Chinese	861	62
Indians	2,047	154

The population classified by sexes is as follows:

	1885	1880
Male	129,131	111,754
Female	65,190	80,529

This shows a large increase of female population as compared with the male. In 1880 there were 50,480 females to every 100,000 males. This proportion has increased in 1885 to 65,000 females to 100,000 males.

Sheep Industry.

Before 1865, extending back to 1850, the only sheep raising in Colorado was by Mexicans on the southern streams near the boundary of New Mexico. The hardy, long-legged, long-wooled, fair-sized natives or Mexican sheep were left almost entirely to "rustle" for existence, and they yielded a clip of from 1½ to 2½ pounds of wool. About 1864 to a few Americans started flocks with the native Mexican ewes, which were bred with rams from the east. In the first named year A. T. Coppan brought in a flock from Missouri. The first Colorado natives were further improved about 1872 by the introduction of merinos. Since that time the better Colorado stock and merinos from Vermont, New York and Pennsylvania have produced further improvement.

As the Mexican blood has diminished the susceptibility to disease has increased, by the delicacy of the high bred stock; but this has been offset by the greater skill and knowledge acquired by the flock masters in their experience of the last fifteen years.

While the fine, heavy wooled merinos are the almost universal sheep of the state, the mutton sheep have been heavily introduced within the past few years. These, the Downs breeds, are superior for the market, and much attention is being given to them.

Since 1870 the progress of the sheep industry has been rapid. The breeds have been improved and the numbers have increased. In that year there were returned for assessment 110,000. This year it is expected that the number will reach 2,000,000. In 1880 the average clip of wool was not quite four pounds, while in this it will average seven. Some of the better flocks will shear nine pounds. The clip for 1885 was nearly 8,000,000 pounds. This was sold at fair prices. The early sales were very low, but those who held their wool got some as high as 18 cents per pound.

Colorado flocks are subject to few diseases. Scab prevails to some extent, and in 1880 spread alarmingly from a diseased flock driven in from California. The estimated annual loss among sheep over twelve months old for an average term of years is 8 per cent, made up by the following causes: Disease, winter and spring storms, wild animals, old age, poisonous weeds and snake bites.

The U. S. census for 1880 gives some illustrations of the business as it is carried on at the present time, the amount of first outlay required and expenses of the year in a selected case, as follows: "Take the experience of one flockmaster, owning about 7,500 sheep in 1880. He owns about 500 acres of land, worth $5,000, and he leases 1,000 acres of school lands for 2½ cents an acre, or $25 per annum. His buildings and fences cost him $1,800; vehicles, tools, etc., $450; four horses, $300; sundries, say, $200. His investment then, putting the sheep (5,917) at the beginning of the year to be worth each $2 50, as in round numbers, $22,000. The 500 acres owned and the 1,000 leased cover the water privileges of 30,000 acres of public lands adjoining, and include meadow or other exceptional and reserved for hay, the different tracts varying from 40 to 1000 acres in extent, sufficient in each case to control the water. He employs four men throughout the year at $35 per month and board. The board may be estimated at 30 cents per day, so that the steady labor costs $2,118 per annum. In addition he hires extra labor during lambing and shearing. For the former, five men, at $30 per month for forty days, which, with board added, makes $260. The cost of shearing the 5,917 adult sheep, at seven cents per fleece, will be $414.19; to which is to be added the board of the shearers, or $60, if seven men shear for nineteen days with an average shear of forty-five fleeces each per day; these together make $474.19; with the incidental labor packing the wool, etc., we may put the extra labor of shearing alone at $500."

Concerning the profits of the business the census report gives an example: "Another sheep-grower in El Paso county began business in 1872 with 770 Mexican ewes and 10 Vermont merino rams, at an aggregate cost of $2100. On July 1, 1880, he had 7500 sheep of which 151 were of the original stock of ewes, the whole flock worth $18,750, and his ranch outfits were worth $7750; total, $26,500. Meantime, since starting in 1872, he had sold wool to the amount of $24,180 and 250 wethers for $625."

A moderate estimate of the value of the sheep of the state together with ranches and improvements, would be about $4,500,000. The assessors' returns give the number at present in the state as 860,696, and their value $925,616. In 1884 the number assessed was 822,283, and their value $1,134,894. The assessors' returns by counties are as follows:

Cattle.

There great difficulty in giving exact figures. We have the assessors' reports which is the minimum estimate the owner's conscience will allow. We have the census which the superintendent says was not correct in cattle. Besides we have the reports of experts and cattle associations. First we give the census on all stock for 1885 and 1880, that were on hand June 1st of each year:

	1885	1880
Horses of all ages	85,613	42,257
Mules and asses, all ages	4,963	2,581
Working oxen	3,6	2,080
Milch cows	48,498	28,770
Other cattle	877,140	316,989
Sheep, inclusive of spring lambs	1,063,341	746,414
Swine	59,280	7,656
Totals	1,760,528	1,145,776

The above is chiefly valuable because of the comparative statistics as the same conditions that prevented a thorough census in 1885 were present in 1880. The table serves, however, to show the proportion of increase. The reports of the assessors show that there were 778,595 cattle in the state last spring valued at $11,296,024. This is well understood to be a low estimate, for obvious reasons. By the assessors' reports there is an increase in cattle in 1885 over 1884 of 98,907 head, and in value, of $980,524. The average value per head in 1884 was $15.6 and in 1885, $15.54.

Probably the most correct estimate is a mean between the report of the State Cattle association and the report of Mr. Stancart to the Bureau of Animal Industry. Mr. Stancart estimates the number at 1,420,388 head. The association estimates the number at 1,500,000. But there are statistics at hand to make up an estimate if we take the estimate of the Cattle association as to the number in the state in 1884, and take into account the movement of cattle. The estimate in 1884 of the association was that there were 1,250,000 cattle. During last season it was estimated that a fourth of the cattle were breeders or 312,000. The number of calves was about 70 per cent or 218,400.

MOVEMENT OF CATTLE.

The statistics regarding the movement of cattle are much more accurate. During the year there have been driven into the state from Texas, New Mexico and Indian Territory 115,587 head of cattle, which have been inspected on the southern boundary and reported by Dr. Faville, the state veterinarian.

There have been brought into the state by rail, mostly from the east, 3 4 cars of cattle, numbering 17,614 head. Of the number shipped in 8,525 were steers, 5,402 cows, 859 bulls and 2,828 were reported as mixed cattle. The bulls were a large grade or thoroughbred animals, the majority being Herefords, closely followed in number by Galloways and Polled Angus.

By glancing over the statistics in the Live Stock record we are enabled to give a summary of cattle in the state during the year. The total number of cars of cattle shipped out of the state during the year is 3,358.

Steers	52,857
Cows	21
Bulls	211
Mixed cattle	2,540
Total	75,579

The numbers slaughtered is incomplete as reported by the inspectors. Reports are only from seven points and these reports cover in some instances only three months. These reports show as follows:

Denver is	16,888
Pueblo, ten months	2,074
Leadville, ten months	4,958
San Luis Valley, ten months	2,251
Durango, four months	912
Fort Collins, three months	549
West Las Animas, three months	117
Uncompahgre, three months	440
Total	27,280

Considering that these reports are for only part of the time and that there are so many points from which no reports are received, it is reasonable to estimate the whole number slaughtered to be about 45,000. The above figures give us some basis for an estimate of the present number of cattle.

Estimated number, '84	1,250,000
Calves, '85	218,400
Driven into state from Texas and other places	115,587
Shipped by rail	17,614
Total	1,601,601
Shipped out of state	75,579
Slaughtered	45,000
Losses, 3 per cent on 1,250,000	37,500
	158,079
Total number	1,443,522

The increase in cattle is about equal to the calf crop.

The most important thing that has occurred during the year affecting the cattle industry was the enactment of laws by the legislature to protect stock from contagious diseases. Two such laws were enacted. One provided for a state veterinary sanitary board and a state veterinarian and defined their duties. The other provided for quarantining against other states where contagious diseases might have an existence. Under these laws the state was quarantined last spring against portions of the east where pleuro-pneumonia was known to exist. All cattle driven to Texas and New Mexico were also admitted only after inspection. The state has been free from any contagious cattle disease.

Last winter was favorable to range interests, and the losses by farmers are placed as low as three per cent on the entire range. The calf crop has been unusually large and is placed at about 70 per cent of the cows.

The feature of the business least pleasing to cattle growers has been the low price of beef, which has felt the depression in all lines of business throughout the country, aggravated probably by the President's order driving herders from Indian territory, which for a time overcrowded the markets. The quarantines against Texas cattle also caused thousands of cattle to be thrown into the market which would otherwise have gone there.

The market for cattle ranches and herds has been dull, and few capitalists have sought investments in that direction. Among the causes are the rulings by the present national administration for the protection of the public domain and the orders removing fences, which caused a general distrust as to the future among eastern people.

Feeding in the winter has proved to be generally unprofitable business, and the number now being fed is probably not more than a quarter of those being fed a year ago. The average price of steers for market was probably $10 per head less than during 1884. This, on the cattle marketed, represents a difference of $1,250,000. With a general revival of business, which is now indicated, the price of beef will doubtless advance with that of other commodities, so that the coming season has its bright aspects. As it is, worst, the business is truly as profitable as others in dull times. As Dr. Moore said, at the St. Louis convention: "The fact remains that the cows on the county east and west, in Texas and Montana; that our steers take on weight and improve in quality; that the 50,000,000 of Americans grow hungry three times a day; that more babies than calves are born—that eaters increase faster than the supply; and that our steers are enumerating an increasing proprietory cosmopolitan constituency."

Horses.

The industry of horse growing has been altogether prosperous during the year. Contagious diseases have not spread among them, though a considerable sensation was created last spring by reports of wide-spread glanders among the range herds. The state veterinarian has examined a large number, and condemned and killed six head. Several others were pronounced as infected with the disease, and were placed in quarantine. They would have been killed had there been any fund available for them.

A large number of fine stallions, principally of Percheron Norman blood, have been imported into the state. More attention is now being paid to breeding trotting and running stock than during previous years, and numbers of promising young animals are growing up to make their mark on the race course.

During the year horse round-ups have been introduced on the range, to the profit and advantage of every breeder.

The total number of horses in the state, reported by assessors is 109,313, valued at $3,822,325, against 101,227 head, valued at $3,783,800 in 1884.

Mr. Stancart's report to the bureau of animal industry estimates the number of horses in the state at 153,356, valued at $9,899,389.

Farming.

Farming in Colorado has shown more progress in the last five years than any other industry. The fact has been recognized for years that we do not begin to cultivate the land that could be cultivated if the water in our streams was all used. Among the ditches recently constructed are ditches from the Rio Grande in San Luis park 150 miles in length and capable of irrigating 275,000 acres of land. Large ditches have been constructed in Mesa, Montrose and Delta counties which have added 200,000 acres of land to the improved land. The English company has built large ditches in the northern part of the state so that now we have nearly a thousand miles of canals which will irrigate about 1,500,000 acres. As yet we have barely tapped the supply. The Arkansas still pours most of its waters through the state. The Rio Grande and the San Juan and tributaries in the south could water twenty times the land they do. While the Grand, Gunnison, Yampa and White present great possibilities to northern and western Colorado. When there is a market for the farm products, we shall find 30,000,000 acres instead of 1,500,000 acres under ditches.

CROPS.

We are slowly finding out that we can raise everything in Colorado except corn, and everything in fruits produced in the temperate zone. We are gradually increasing the variety of our crops, so that in a very few years we shall produce the fruit, vegetables and other things that we are buying outside of the state. It is only within two or three years that we have stopped importing wheat and potatoes and the chances of our producing all the cereals, vegetables, and fruits that we need is much better now than was the chance ten years ago of our raising all of our wheat and oats. Our rapid increase as an agricultural state is shown by the fact that in 1880 616,169 acres of improved land and 549,204 acres of unimproved lands are reported in the census and in 1885 there were 1,647,805 acres of improved and 718,820 unimproved. This is an increase of improved lands in five years of a most 300 per cent.

PRODUCTS.

The census report of 1885 gives the following statistics regarding ranches and ranching that are very incomplete, but still the comparisons with previous years are valuable.

The following table, showing the quantity in bushels of cereals raised in 1879 and 1884 respectively:

	1879	1884
Barley	196,116	134,053

The estimated value of all farm productions sold, consumed or on hand for the year 1884, was $7,386,322, while in 1879 it was $5,035,228.

The above comparisons show what a decided advance has been made since 1879, and how prosperous farmers are.

Mining.

GOLD AND SILVER.

Special to the Gazette.

DENVER, December 31.—A review of the Colorado mining industry for 1885 shows the total mineral output to be $22,500,000, divided as follows: Silver, $13,000,000; gold, $5,000,000; lead, $4,000,000; copper, $500,000. For 1884 the total output was placed at $20,750,000, showing an increase in favor of 1885 of $1,750,000. As compared with figures for 1884, the product of gold and copper has very perceptibly increased, while lead has fallen off materially, although the average price paid has been greater. The gold yield has increased more than $1,000,000 and silver about the same. Copper has more than doubled, and the outlook is bright for a continued increase in that metal from many sections of the state. The smelters assert that the tonnage has decreased and values greatly enhanced, or, in other words, the grade of ore has been higher in bullion as a rule than any heretofore mined in the state. For months the great beds of ore at the valley smelters have ranged in value from $45 to $90 per ton, as charged into the furnaces, which, of course, includes flux ingredients. Silver ores have not only averaged higher in that metal, but have also carried considerable amounts of gold and copper. Concentration has also played an important part in reducing tonnage and advancing grades. Good mining has been more actively prosecuted than for many years, both upon lode properties and placer diggings. The outlook for a heavier product in future years is one of the brightest features of the mining industry of Colorado. Experienced men, backed by abundant capital, are vigorously perfecting arrangements to mine for gold on a scale never before attempted in this state.

Having reviewed the operations of last year at length, and showed the existing facilities for reaching the mineral product of our mines it is proper to speak in conclusion of the outlook with which the new year opens. Mining conducted in experienced hands as a rule, and reduced on certainty is. The exposures of ore in all counties of the state are in advance of any previous year, and new properties are giving stronger indications of becoming bonanzas in more numerous instances than has ever been known in Colorado or any other mining country, without excepting any. The only drawback to our quick strides to booming prosperity is the danger that menaces silver.

The following figures are of Lake county's bullion product for the past twelve months:

La Plata, bullion	$ 2,213,766
Carrison, bullion	1,503,079
Manville bullion	568,772
Dryer Hill, bullion	108,538
Arkansas Valley, bullion	1,270,695
American, bullion	627,376
Oregonian, gold bars	31,980
Lulamon, gold bars	[illegible]
Anchor, gold bars	[illegible]
Tucker gold	34,672
Chrysolite, silver bars	12,658
Arkansas Valley sampler, ore shipments	1,[illegible]2,440
Holden sampler, ore shipments	2,458,[illegible]
Morning and Evening Star smelters	195,2[illegible]
Other shipments	1,422,173
Total	$12,890,6[illegible]

Lead is becoming scarcer, owing in part to a change in the character of the ore as depth is attained in many districts, and in others, to an exhaustion of lead deposits. The smelters, therefore, have been forced to use less lead and give preliminary roasting to rebellious ores instead of charging them raw in small quantities, as heretofore. They have also contracted for the entire output of heavy lead producers or purchased outright mines of this character, to secure the amount absolutely necessary for their water jacket furnaces. One of the Pueblo smelters controls some of the great lead mines of the Monarch district, Chaffee county, and the Omaha and Grant works in Denver has purchased and is operating the vast lead deposit known as the Terrible mine of Custer county, besides owning a large group of lead properties in Bingham canon, Utah. This action of the large valley smelters has relieved the pressure lately made upon the smelters at Leadville by spirited competition which threatened at one time to close down the smelting industries of Lake county. The price of lead at the beginning of the year was $3 60 per hundred pounds, and is now firm at $4.87½.

While lead has appreciated in value, silver has pursued an opposite course and is nearly six cents an ounce lower than the low price at which it stood at the beginning of the year. A though copper is depressed in price, there is an increasing demand for it and buyers are encouraging miners to work the many veins in which the silver contents are low but the copper percentage high. Many of the lead mines, in certain districts are changing into copper from lead and silver, copper is associated with high lead and silver values. The valley smelters have all turned out more copper than during any previous year, and one ore-buying firm has shipped out of the state nearly $700,000 worth of concentrates in which copper was an important factor. Some of this ore had copper as the principal ingredient of value. The great [illegible] of gold and silver values principally, with some lead.

In concluding this review of Colorado's mining industry for the past year it is satisfactory to call attention to certain facts as follows. We have increased our gold product and prospects. Our average ore yield has been higher than in history. We have greater reserves of ore than ever. We have wonderfully enlarged our mining area. We have greatly multiplied the number of our producing mines. We have increased our smelting and milling facilities. We have received and tendered productive abandoned mines in many districts. We have utilized lower grades and economically treated ores heretofore held as refractory. We have improved in concentration and reduced losses in tailings everywhere to the minimum. We have record of exhaustion of any [illegible] mine, for in any district or country, and once we assert and well informed business men confirm the statement that we are in a healthier condition with greater evidences of permanency and thrift than at any time in our history.

LEADVILLE'S OUTLOOK.

Special to the Gazette.

LEADVILLE, December [illegible].—The statement of the Herald-Democrat, prepared by great care and unquestionably accurate, will place the output for 1885 at a little below that of 1884, or rather less than twelve and a [illegible] millions. The lead output has fallen off decidedly, but the output of silver and gold shows a marked increase. If the price of silver had maintained the range of '84 the showing for this year would have been better than last. The immense values recently uncovered have not been mined and do not figure in the estimates. The greatest hopefulness prevails throughout this camp, and is most marked among those best informed. It is conceded on all sides that the outlook was never more promising than at present. Fabbri's Maid of Erin is in forty-two feet of ore, and the bottom not reached. This settles the "second contract" question in favor of a long term of substantial prosperity for Leadville. A hopeful feature of the recent great strikes is that they open a wide extent of territory. The day of deep mining is fairly inaugurated in this district.

THE NEWS' ESTIMATE.

Special to the GAZETTE.

DENVER, December [illegible].—The figures here presented are the result of a careful canvass and may be relied on as approximating the truth, though many readers will consider them far too low: Gold, $5,000,000; silver, $13,000,000; lead, $4,000,000; copper, $500,000 total, $22,500,000. The product of [illegible] as given by the director of the mint in his report was gold, $4,250,000; silver, $16,000,000, thus showing a gain in the last over the previous year of $750,000 in gold and a loss of $3,000,000 in silver.

THE DENVER MINT.

During the year ending June 30, 1885, the gold bullion domestic product on deposited and purchased at the assay office in Denver amounted to 82,168 ounces, the jewelers' bars, old plate, etc., amounted to 217 ounces; the imported bars to 812 ounces, making a total of 83,198 ounces. The fractions of ounces are omitted. The silver deposited amounted to 19,922 ounces. The total value of the gold deposited was $1,547,876.09, and the silver $23,182.04. The total value of the deposits during the calendar year including December 31, 1884, was $1,508,147 50. During the year 1885 the value of the deposits was $1,207,933. The total earnings of the Denver assay office during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1885, amounted to $4,969.08, and the expenses were $28,245 35. A comparison of the business of the assay office during the fiscal years ending June 30, 1884, and June 30, 1885, shows that the value of the deposits during 1884 were $1,387,027 37, and during 1885, $1,571,058.13.

HOME RULE

Just what is meant by home rule in Ireland is not well understood. The term has not been well defined. The nearest approach to a definition was given by Justin McCarthy, who said he wished [illegible] to have the same rights under the home rule that an American state has under the general government. This means local self-government, and was fairly clear. But Mr. McCarthy gives the definition in the following:

When, therefore, we are asked what we mean by home rule, we reply: That the very first principles as well as all reasonable precaution demand that the integrity of the empire, but granted that our only measure of success is the measure of the wishes of the Irish people, unless we are acting upon this principle, what is the use of moving in the matter at all? The leaders of the Liberal party in England are rejoicing that they still hold the country boroughs in England and also Wales and Scotland. Wales returns 27 Liberals and three conservatives. Scotland returns 63 Liberals and nine conservatives; England 24 Liberals to 220 conservatives. Ireland returns no Liberals and 15 conservatives.

The Marquis of Queensbury was expelled from the representative peers of Scotland in the last parliament because of his atheism. A few days ago he protested before the peers against his exclusion and attempted to show that he believed in God. But he was declared out of order and left the chamber. This would have pleased John Knox who evidently is not forgotten.

The account of the Christmas tree at the Deaf Mute Institute will be read with pleasure. The liberality of our merchants and private contributions from our city gave to these unfortunate children a very happy day. We are glad to notice this kindly feeling and sympathy. Though this is a state institution, it is located here, and there is every reason why we should take a personal interest in the work of the institution.

The New York real estate man spoken of in our dispatches is not showing extraordinary business sagacity in making his leases read that payments shall be in gold coin. If the coinage continues there is no danger for some years to come. France has about $600,000,000 of silver to $800,000,000 of gold and has no trouble to keep both coins in circulation. We now have $650,000,000 in gold. To have the same proportion of silver, we should have about $490,000,000. If we coin at the present rate, it will be about ten or twelve years before we increase our stock of silver so as to have the same proportion to gold that France has.

Justine McCarthy says he will be satisfied if Ireland has a parliament with powers similar to one of our states. If this is the view of Parnell and other home rulers, it ought not to be difficult to satisfy them. If there could be local parliaments in England, Scotland, Wales and Ireland and in the colonies to treat of the same class of questions as our state legislatures do, and if there could be an imperial parliament representing all English colonies as well as Great Britain, which should consider the same class of questions as our congress, the government of Great Britain would represent a far more compact nation. This has been suggested before and will carry very soon.

Our dispatches speak of January 2d next as the 25th anniversary of the accession of Emperor William to the throne of Prussia. He became king of Prussia at the death of his brother on January 2, 1861. Hence next January will be the twenty-fifth anniversary. He was proclaimed emperor of Germany January 18, 1871. His career did not begin until that of most men ends. He was 61 when he became king of Prussia and 74 when he became emperor of Germany. Before that his life had been that of a soldier, which began in 1813 in the campaigns against Napoleon and lasted until he became regent of the kingdom of Prussia in 1858. There is not likely to be trouble about success on as he has a son, grandson and great grandson in a direct line.

Yesterday Jules J. Grevy was re-elected president of the French republic by a good majority. He was first elected president on January 30, 1879, for seven years. According to the constitution of 1875, the president is to be elected by the senate and chamber of deputies. The term is seven years and a re-election is permitted. His majority in 1879 was 461. This year it is only 135. President Grevy was born in 1808 and is now in his 78th year. We should consider him too old a man to be elected to such an office for so long a term. He was educated as a lawyer. Since 1848 he has been active in politics and has been most of that time in the national assembly. In 1871 he was elected president of the assembly. In 1876 he was elected president of the chamber of deputies and served until elected president of the republic in 1879. France seems to choose old men to be her president. Thiers held office until he died when he was over 80 years of age.

The Deadwood Herald is the newspaper of the greatest mining camp in the state. This is its opinion of Senator Teller's new silver bill: "The Herald-Democrat has said its say on the question of Senator Teller's bill. We have too high an opinion of its author's sagacity to entertain for one instant the belief that he committed a blunder in the interests of silver. We believe he simply and deliberately betrayed what he knew to be the best interests of silver, and the well-matured plans of the silver association for his own selfish encouragement to make bunkum for himself with the groundlings in view of the impending investigation of his management of the interior department. Mr. Teller is not a fool. He is the most capable man in the state. He has not blundered through any mental feebleness. He has committed a deliberate crime against a holy cause through his utter and causeless selfishness."

The new perfectly well that he was spoiling the programme of the silver association. It is at least gratifying to know that his selfishness has overreached itself. One of the prime parties in silver mining of this camp the day after the bill was introduced: "He ought to be kicked around the capitol. It is another piece of his cold, calculating, cammy selfishness." Yet this man had been a friend and supporter of Teller."

We publish this morning a letter from Mr. Loomis of Leadville regarding the recent strike. Mr. Loomis is a reliable man, and his statements and opinions are entitled to great respect. If it is true that there is a conspiracy to again defraud the public, the papers of Colorado should be the first to expose the fraud. The frauds of 1879 and 1880 did irreparable injury to the state. The Chaffees made by it, but the state has not yet recovered from the blow. There is still great suspicion of and want of confidence in our mines. We think this want of confidence was amply justified by the gigantic frauds in the Little Pittsburg and Robinson Consolidated. But still mining is a legitimate business and generally is carried on with some respect to honor and honesty. It is too bad therefore that all honest miners should have suffered for the rascalities of the Chaffee crowd in 1880. The public should be taught to discriminate between legitimate mining and stock jobbing in mining stock. The distinction is made in the railroad business and should be made in mining. The managers of the C. B. & Q. are not classed with the Jay Goulds. Nor should the industrious honest miner be classed with the Chaffees. The papers of Colorado can make this distinction clear by denouncing all stock jobbing operations and thus protect the state as well as the miner. We do not know all the facts about the Male of Erin and cannot give any opinion. But Mr. Loomis says enough to show it is largely worth while to sell four per cents to buy any stock in the mines that have the wonderful strikes.

LITERARY

Harper's Magazine for January, in richness of illustration and in its literary attractions, seems like another Christmas number. It has, indeed, several articles especially appropriate to the season. Not the least remarkable of these is a Christmas sketch—"an echo of plantation life"—entitled "Uncle Hamburg's Drowndin'," by Thomas N. Page, the author of "Marse Chan." It is as faithful in its pictures of old plantation life as in its reproduction of the negro dialect, and is strikingly humorous and pathetic. Archibald Forbes, the famous war correspondent, tells the story of a Christmas holiday spent with the Germans on the fore-posts of Paris during the Franco-German war. The narrative is graphically illustrated from sketches made on the spot and at the time by Mr. Sidney L. Hall.

The number opens with a very interesting paper by Mrs. Lucy C. Lillie, entitled "Winter in Devonshire," illustrated by Alfred Parsons, C. S. Reinhart, and Mr. Paget.

S. G. W. Benjamin, late United States minister to Persia, contributes a valuable article on "Domestic and Court Customs of Persia," richly illustrated.

The fourth of the series of "Great American Industries" is a thorough exposition of the petroleum business, from the sinking of an oil well to the processes of the refinery, amply illustrated.

"She Stoops to Conquer" is continued, with five illustrations by E. A. Abbey, one of which serves as a frontispiece to the number.

Mary Tucker Magill contributes a southern sketch entitled "Sis," illustrated by Jessie Curtis Shepherd.

A beautiful poem, "On the Marshes," by Alice Comyns Carr, is illustrated by W. Hagelt.

The late General George B. McClellan's paper on "The Militia and the Army," appearing so soon after his death, may be regarded as his last word to his fellow-countrymen on a subject of grave importance—one, too, respecting which no one was more competent to speak; and his suggestions are well considered and of the utmost importance.

Moncure D. Conway contributes a paper of considerable literary interest, entitled "Hunting a Mythical Pall-Bearer." The pall-bearer was supposed to have officiated at Shakespeare's funeral, and Shakespearian students have been much interested in the account of a newspaper correspondent who professed to have discovered an inscription on an old tombstone in Maryland supporting this hypothesis. Under a searching investigation the pall-bearer, and so much of the inscription as related to him, vanishes, and Mr. Conway exhibits the insignificent remainder.

Miss Woolson's powerful novel, "East Angels," is continued, and Mr. Howe's fascinating story, "Indian Summer," approaches its conclusion.

Mr. Howells, in this number, gives the first installment of the new editorial department which he has undertaken to conduct in Harper's Magazine—the Editor's Study. It follows the Easy Chair and Mr. Curtis, in the latter, gracefully introduces his readers to the adjoining department. The "Study" itself is quaintly described by Mr. Howells. His "vast windows of lawless space," he says, "look out upon the confluent waters of the Hudson and the Darkness, with expanses, in the middle distance, of the Mississippi, the Great Desert, and the Golden Gate, and in the background, the misty line of the Thames, with reaches of the remoter Seine, and glints of the Tiber's yellow tide." Here the editor sits and talks over with the reader "such matters of literary interest as may come up from time to time, whether suggested by the new books of the day or other accidents of the literary life." The entire "Study" for this month is made up of the most suggestive bits of literary criticism, bright, humorous, and unwaveringly American in tone.

The "Editor's Drawer," too, is uncommonly good. Mr. Charles Dudley Warner, who conducts this department, introduces it with a piece of exquisite humor—"A Plea for the Fluctuating Female."

LITERARY NOTES

Mr. Clark Russell's new story—written in the agonies of rheumatism—is entitled "The Golden Hope."

An English edition of Wide-Awake will hereafter be published in London, beginning with the new year.

Mrs. Bancroft, the English actress, is writing her recollections of actors and actresses and of fashionable life.

Canon Farrar has an article on the Church in America in the January number of the North American Review.

George Saintsbury's volume of "Specimens of English Prose Style" is to be published in this country by Jansen, McClurg & Co. This American edition will be printed in London from the English plates.

"How much did Poe or his publishers get for his innumerable English editions? Was Longfellow much better paid by England?" These are pertinent questions asked not by an American, but by an editorial writer for the London Daily News.

The Marquis of Lorne, Colonel Ingersoll, Millionaires Astor and Carnegie, an Irish member of parliament elect, John Boyle O'Reilly, Cassius M. Clay, Sir John MacDonald, and Frank B. Sanborn have articles in the January number of the North American Review.

Artist friends of Mr. C. G. Leland have furnished him with funny accounts of their experiences with the people who gather round artists while they are at work or peer over their shoulders. He intends to publish a collection of these anecdotes and to call it "Snooping."

The London Standard commits itself to this remarkable statement concerning Tennyson's new book: "We have read these poems with great delight, because they not only show no falling off in the Laureate's powers, but, in our own opinion, a distinct improvement, which, at the age of seventy-four, as Lord Tennyson tells us that he is, is something to be observed with admiration."

The innumerable lovers of Stockton's unique stories will be glad to learn that this writer will make frequent appearances in early numbers of The Century. In January will be given a complete short story by him, entitled "The Cloverfields Carriage," a story of life in "Old Virginia," and in February a novelette will be begun with the characteristic title of "A Borrowed Month."

The New York Shakespearean society is about to make its report on the supposed autograph of Shakespeare now in the possession of C. F. Gunther, of Chicago. The report is to be accompanied by full detail photographs of the folio, the autograph, and the various memoranda, signatures and inscriptions on the book and bindings; and will be printed in the regular series of the society's publications.

General Beauregard will give a history of the Shiloh campaign in the January number of the North American Review. He claims that Gen Algernon Sydney Johnson acted only as a corps commander at Shiloh. General Beauregard emphatically asserts (contrary to the common belief) that he was the sole commander on both days, and, without naming them, controverts the reports of Grant and Sherman as to the nation's forces being taken by surprise.

W. J. Linton, the distinguished English engraver and writer, now in this country, was authorized, and deputed by Mazzini to be the exponent of his principles in America. Probably no one living is better able to write authoritatively on that group of "European Republicans" who are the subject of an article by Mr. Linton in the forthcoming Century. The illustrations are all engraved by the author himself, and include a full-page portrait of his friend Mazzini.

PERSONAL.

The wife of the Japanese Minister is said to be the most expert needlewoman in Washington.

Herr Emowald, the German explorer of Zululand, is going back to Europe, and will publish a report of his researches.

The famous painter, Adolph Menzel, received many congratulations on the completion of his seventieth year. The Emperor William wrote him a letter, and the crown prince personally called on him and gave him a gold snuff box.

Lists of "Lord Salisbury's new peers" are now a favorite object of speculation in the English press. Sir Massey Lopes and Sir Watkin Wynn are generally conceded to be among the elect, and the name of Mr. Beresford-Hope is occasionally mentioned.

Mr. W. W. Corcoran, the Washington philanthropist, celebrated his eighty-seventh birthday anniversary last Sunday. He is in excellent health, and attends to business regularly every day. His gifts to the public up to date are said to aggregate considerably more than a million dollars.

Ralph, the only son of the actress Modjeska, is connected with the chief engineer's department of the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy railroad. He was graduated last year in Paris, and took the highest honors at the Polytechnique in road and bridge building. The second honors were taken by a Japanese.

Miss Jane Bancroft, Ph. D., for eight years past the professor of the French language and literature of the Northwestern university at Evanston, Ills., and dean of its woman's college, has resigned her several offices in order to accept the fellowship in history at Bryn Mawr college. Miss Bancroft is a graduate of Syracuse university.

Dr. William Hayes Ward, the director of the Wolfe expedition to Bagdad, said the other evening at a meeting of the New York society of the Archæological Institute of America that in passing through Constantinople he was treated with great courtesy by the professors in Roberts college. "But," he added, "that is all I can say in favor of the Turkish government or its people."

This story is told of Mr. Choate, the lawyer: The son of a prominent prelate was ushered into his office one day. Mr. Choate, who was writing at the time, merely said, "Take a chair," and went on with his writing. After the lapse of fifteen minutes of an embarrassing silence the visitor grew impatient and said: "I'm Bishop ——'s son." Whereupon Mr. C. replied, "Take two chairs."

THE CHURCH AND THE COW.

LONDON, December 12, 1885.

(The cow is winning in the end. Whereas the conservatives carried most of the boroughs with the cry "Save the church!" the Liberals have carried the counties with the cry "Vote for us, and you shall have each three acres of land and a cow!" Each party claims a victory; but, for my own part, I only see one victor, and that is Mr. Parnell, who has eighty-six followers, the whole of Ireland at his back, as it were. Whoever has failed in the elections, it is not Mr. Parnell. Only four members remain to be elected, and the result now known is: Liberals 332, conservatives 249, Parnellites 86, independents 2. So you see that conservatives and Parnellites uniting together are stronger than the Liberals, and that no government will be possible unless Mr. Parnell is squared. I rather envy the position of the two independents. They seem to be holding now in their hands the future destinies of the British empire. Of course there is a lot of conservatives and Liberals combining their forces against Mr. Parnell, but this, in plain English, would mean civil war in Ireland, and the re-conquest of the sister island by force of arms. A Home of peace rests upon the possibility of Mr. Gladstone and Mr. Parnell coming to terms. A man who has the whole of his country at his back is an important factor in politics. The Parnellites were returned by majorities of something like 6000 votes to two or three hundred given to their opponents. If Mr. Gladstone can maintain a scheme in the Liberal ranks as Mr. Parnell does in the ranks of the nationalists, it seems possible to see arrangements concluded for the better government of Ireland and the redress of the real grievances of the Irish. Unfortunately I hear that Lord Salisbury accepts the Irish vote as a victory for the conservative party, or rather as a condemnation of the Liberal party, and that he will not resign. There is nothing like boldness, but really he can't be hard to please. He has power to be temporizing under the circumstances.

I have always wondered how King Theebaw could be so foolish, so blind, as to refuse the English demands, even if they were unjust, and to proclaim war against such a formidable neighbor. But in the explanation of his conduct in a very interesting interview published by the Times, in a conversation between the Paris correspondent of the Juge London daily and the envoy extraordinary of the late King of Burmah, in Paris, the latter explained how superstition prevailed in Burmah, and how the English should make use of it in order to govern their new acquisition. Sovereigns styling themselves "King of Kings," "Light of the World," "Star of the Earth," "Lord of the Elephants," are looked on by the people as superior beings, not to be ranked with ordinary mortals. Such peoples must only be governed in the name of supersitious personification; otherwise the English would have to suppress endless revolts, organized banditti, and armies of 60,000 men would have to be posted at all points to maintain order and enforce obedience. It would take years to establish even an imperfect civilization in Burmah. The Burmese have for their guidance astrologers who raise temples and monuments, monuments of folly, ignorance and fanaticism. King Theebaw trusted to these astrologers, and their accomplices, or dupes, in making war with the English, and was assured by them that he would annihilate their forces. It is said that the Burmese are quietly accepting themselves to the new state of affairs and "loyally" co-operating in effecting the restoration and maintenance of order. Whether it is right for England to quarrel with foreign rulers, whenever English settlers get into difficulties, is not a question for me to decide, but in this case I have no hesitation in offering my humble congratulations to the poor Burmese upon being delivered from the abject yoke of a young bloodthirsty tyrant, whose deeds have sent many a thrill of horror through the civilized world.

The new house of commons will be deprived of its most active member Sir Wilfred Lawson, the great advocate of water drinking, who is among the Christian heroes who have been defeated at the general election. His failure will be regretted by all parties alike, because it deprives the new parliament of an inveterate wag. It is said that the Irish vote has thrown him overboard. His opponent was elected by a majority of ten votes. Mr. Parnell might have exempted the merry baronet from the wholesale boycotting of the Liberal candidates contained in his manifesto, as he was one of the few anti-coercionists in the late parliament. Sir Wilfred is an honest and fearless politician, and a general favorite with all classes of society except the public-house keepers, of whom he is of course the bitterest foe. His speeches sparkle with wit and humor, and their charm consists especially in the manner he utters them. He is a grave witty and quiet, dry, humorist. I fear we have seen the last of Sir Wilfred Lawson in the house of commons. His health is very unsatisfactory, and it is probable that he will not trouble himself much further with politics. He had represented the town of Carlisle since 1859.

M. De Lesseps, who celebrated his eighteenth birthday a fortnight ago, has met with a very serious accident. He fell from his horse and received some serious injuries on the face. But he will recover, and the worst will be gone to hear, for fortunately "he is young," as he says, and the only annoyance that he experiences from his accident is that of being kept quietly in his room for a few days. I am afraid that he will not be able to stand that very long. He must have his rice every day in the Bois de Boulogne. Besides, he is now contemplating a great journey. He made Africa an isle, and he wants to see South America an isle, and he will not die before he has had a sail through the Panama canal. What distinguishes him at present is that ministers, ambassadors, decorations, friends, and throng to his house to obtain news of his health. He is not ill, he says, and does not like it.

Alfred Tennyson—I beg his pardon—Lord Tennyson (I cannot get reconciled to that new grotesque appellation)—has just issued a new volume of poetry, called "Tiresias." The poet-laureate of England seems determined to maintain to the end the neck-and-neck race which he has been running for more than fifty years of public life with Mr. Gladstone. "We life and labors," said Mr. Gladstone of his friend after their famous yachting tour last autumn, "have corresponded a time exactly with my own." In an article entitled "Two grand old men," the Pall Mall Gazette recalls the different phases of this interesting race between the two probably greatest sons of Albion. Mr. Gladstone, refreshed with the sea breezes, carries the new reform bill and accords one more triumph to his political record. Lord Tennyson promptly replies by publishing his "Becket." Mr. Gladstone since then has been down to Midlothian and has fought an election in the country, which it has not yet decided. The political results expected from it, has at all events been remarkable evidence of the veteran's vigor. The poet laureate is not to be outdone, and he comes up neck-and-neck to Mr. Gladstone again by publishing a volume of poems, which shows that in many respects the poet laureate has still the strength, the grace, and the sweetness that he had half a century ago. The new volume deserves to rank with the best of Tennyson's. It possesses that haunting, melodic quality, which is peculiar to him, and if it is possible for anything to add to his reputation, this volume is sure to do so. Lord Tennyson is seventy-seven years old; but genius has no age. Auber was eighty-four, when he composed that lovely opera "Le Premier Jour de Bonheur." I should not wonder if, at eighty, Mr. Gladstone were to solve the Irish problem, and Tennyson give us a volume of new poems.

At least things are beginning to revive. The election fever is subsiding, and people begin to have eyes and ears for other things than candidates for parliament. One of the pleasant signs of the recovery is the reappearance of Mr. Toole at his little theatre in King William street, and the mighty feast of mirth there enjoyed by his numberless faithful ones. What a favorite he is! It is no wonder, but it is a most a pity in one sense, for the admiration of all that he does, has, many of us think, prevented him from doing still greater things. It is announced that Mr. Burnand, the burlesque writer and the editor of Punch, is engaged on a parody of "Faust" in which Mr. Toole will be the Mephistopheles. This performance will be looked forward to with great eagerness by those who remember "Stage Dora," the parody of "Fedora." It is likely to be on the boards at the same time as "Faust" at the Lyceum theatre, and when we have been thrilled by Henry Irving's rendering of the ever-fascinating tale, we shall be able to go and have a hearty laugh at Toole's travesty, and get our facial muscles put to rights again. Whilst on the subject of Mr. Toole, I may mention that his daughter is engaged to be married to Mr. Justin H. McCarthy, son of the historian and novel writer and member of parliament. Mr. McCarthy junior is himself member of parliament, and the fortunate author of that most successful play "The Candidate," which has already been played 200 nights consecutively at the Criterion theatre.

A novelty in Paris are eclipsed by the appearance of "Georgette," M. Victorien Sardou's new play. It is a dramatic production of the type of "Denise," Alexandre Dumas' last success at the Theatre Français. In "Denise," as you may know, M. Dumas posed the question whether a respectable man may take to wife a girl who has been seduced. This question he debated, as it were, through several acts, aiming at proving the affirmative. People listened and were fascinated, but most of them remained unconvinced. M. Sardou in his "Georgette," discusses in four acts whether a man, belonging to an honorable family, may marry the virtuous and well bred daughter of a woman who has bought a footing in society with money amassed in an immoral youth. Practically, M. Sardou does not answer the question, although it is debated all through the play. The solution of the dilemma, in which the hero and heroine find themselves, is a renunciation on the girl's part of a matrimonial alliance which would cut her off from the society of her once-erring but devoted mother. The play is full of pathos and is a physiological study of the first water. Personally, I do not care much whether demi-mondaines are praised or condemned, they are talked of, and there lies the evil, to my mind. In England this kind of woman exists as she exists everywhere and has existed in all ages, but she is ignored as a member of society, whereas in Paris—I do not say in France—she enjoys the freedom of the city. This state of things is no doubt in great measure attributable to the most pathetic picture of a sentimental demi-mondaine that M. Dumas gave the world in his "Dame aux Camélias." The chivalrous character of the French is just the ground to sow such seed upon. Frenchmen, looking at a fallen woman, see in her the victim of men, and, when they judge her at all, they are disposed to palliate her faults and look upon her as more sinned against than sinning. In France even woman's errors tend to her advantage. If she breaks her marriage vows, it is not she who is covered with shame, it is her husband who is covered with ridicule; and people immediately look for defects in him and excuses for her. Where Englishmen would see nothing but wickedness, Frenchmen will see nothing but weakness.

MAX O'RELL.

An Unlucky Locomotive

Railway World.

One of the most daring exploits of the war occurred on the Western and Atlantic railway. It was an attempt on the part of a small band of Federal soldiers to burn the bridges on that road, thereby destroying the means of communication between Atlanta and Chattanooga. The leader was a man named Andrews, of Ohio. He proposed the scheme to General Mitchell, at Shelbyville, and was to be paid $60,000 in gold if successful. Seven members of the Second Ohio regiment volunteered for the dangerous mission. Their names were William Campbell, George D. Wilson, M. A. Ross, J. G. Shadrack, Samuel Slavens, S. Robinson, and John Scott. Fourteen men of the Twenty-first Ohio were also detailed for the duty. On April 12, 1862, Andrews and his men disguised themselves and boarded a train at Marietta, 20 miles north of Atlanta, on the Western and Atlantic railroad. At Big Shanty, five miles up the road, they uncoupled the engine and three cars from the train while the passengers were in at breakfast. The care-devils then started for Chattanooga. They cut the telegraph wires to prevent information of their act being sent on ahead of them. Then took place what was probably the most exciting race in the annals of war. The conductor, engineer, and the superintendent of the road shops started in pursuit. After running along the track on foot for a good distance they reached a hand car, and, gathering up reinforcements as they went, they pushed along vigorous by after the audacious bridge burners. The latter had been delayed at Kingston by the south-bound train being out of time. When questioned by the agent here the Federals told a story about carrying ammunition to Beauregard. At several places the pursuers found the track torn up or obstacles placed across the rails. At Etowah they secured an engine and a coal car, and got to Kingston 25 minutes behind the bridge burners. Here they took another engine. Near Acworth their progress was again stopped by a train of track. The pursuers footed it to Acworth and turned back the engine of the down train. Every once in a while they had to stop to remove cross-ties from the track. A mile and a half behind Calhoun they in sight of the flying fugitives, who dropped a car to block the way. To the unionists it was now a race for life. They knew their pursuers were drawing nearer and nearer. Their fuel was exhausted and their steam was giving out. The oil cans and everything inflammable were turned into the diminishing fire. At Dalton they picked up more cross-ties. At Ringgold the pace of the engine began to lag, and several miles beyond the race was over. The unionists reversed their engine, in order to cause a collision with their pursuers, and took to the woods. Then there was a man hunt by the enraged southerners. All of the northerners were captured and carried to Knoxville, and there court-martialed. When caught, Andrews had a great deal of money on his person, and he offered $10,000 for his release. The prisoners were defended by Gen. John Baxter and Judge Gaut. Andrews and his seven volunteers of the Second Ohio regiment were convicted as spies. Andrews was executed in June, 1862, near Walton Spring, and the others were hanged southeast of the Atlanta cemetery. Twenty-two of the men of the Twenty-first Ohio were not tried, and were afterward regularly exchanged.

Referring to this the Railway Review says: "The stolen engine mentioned in the above clipping is still in existence, and is used as a switching engine at Atlanta. She is the No. 3, and is a Rogers, and has the original Yankee valve motion. She enjoys the unenviable reputation of being the unluckiest engine on the Western & Atlantic road, having caused the death of nearly twenty men, exclusive of the eight soldiers who were hanged for stealing her. Her reputation as a man killer was so well established that it was difficult to get engineers to run her while she was employed as a road engine."

Our Charmers in Paris.

Paris Figaro.

Let not our good Brother Jonathan carry his head too high; it is not through him, but through his charming daughters, that American society has gained its prouclisposition in Paris. How captivating the American girl is in society! From the moment she made her first appearance in the salon of Paris she created a perfect furore. Her engaging manners, her freedom from restraint, her familiar handshake at once conquered that class of young men, more numerous than most people imagine, who frequent doubtful society on account of their excessive timidity when in good society.

What can be more pleasant to an embarrassed youth in company than to have the conversation started and carried on by a pretty, chatty girl, totally devoid of false modesty and awkwardness, and having rarely, if ever, an arriere pensee of marriage, nor can we conceive anything more pleasant for a young man than to be chaffed and brightened up, so to speak, by pretty girls—for such the American girl always is—who have none of that stiffness and gaucherie, rather the hands, feet, and love of gaudy colors so characteristic of their Anglo Saxon great grandmothers; but this is not all.

If the American girl has not invented imitation she has certainly brought it to its highest perfection. It must never be forgotten that it was she, who first introduced into the Parisian salons the delightful and unrivaled innovation known as the Boston dance. The waltz is charming, enchanting, you will, but it lacks one so-called trifling thing—you cannot chat with your partner. In the Boston dance you may chat to your heart's content. This dance, which is so voluptuously slow, and which is besides as applicable to air of the polka, the mazurka, and the quadrilles to those of the waltz, is the surest auxiliary of the light. The dancer leads the dancerie backward and forward, into this corner or that, and as they glide between the couples in their easy, unhurried manner he may pour into her ear the oldest tale. This is an undisputed triumph over the waltz, which can only be spoken with cerise lips.

Mr. Evarts' New Private Secretary.

Washington Dispatch to the Boston Globe.

Oliver Wendell Holmes was one of the distinguished visitors at the capitol today. He walked through the corridors under the escort of Senator William Maxwell Evarts, and smiled between the senator's long strides as it he appreciated the peculiar honor due him. There is a copy of the rules of the senate hanging on each door of the ante-rooms, and the persons entitled to admittance during the sessions of the senate mentioned. Mr. George Bancroft is the only private individual entitled to entrance.

Mr. Evarts did not look at the notice as he passed through, and Mr. Holmes did not see it. The doorkeepers did not like to object, and both took seats in the senate floor. Mr. Holmes took a seat on the sofa in the corridor and Mr. Evarts went over to Senator Hoar to inform him about his visitor. The senator was taken for the moment and Eugene Hale was taken instead. Other eastern senators were summoned and paid their respects to the poet, whose senator Evarts, evidently appreciating the fact that he had done everything possible for his friend, took a seat alone on another sofa.

"By the way, Senator," said Mr. Hale, coming over to them a few minutes later, "how did you get him in?"

"He is my private secretary," replied Mr. Evarts dryly.

Like a New York Servant Girl.

London Life.

This might have found a place in Dean Ramsay's reminiscences. A country Lowland farmer, of a miserly disposition, went to a fair to hire a farm servant, and peering about him, he observed a tall, well-grown lad, with a vacant expression of countenance. Him he accosted, and found that "Jock," as he called himself, was an "innocent"—half witted. The farmer, thinking that this was a good opportunity for picking up a strong fellow, who would take low wages and not quarrel with the very plain fare of his kitchen, questioned him, and finding that he was used to farm work, engaged him. Then, remembering that he knew nothing of the youth's character, he added, "But I mun hae your character, ye ken, Jock, I engage no man wi'out a character. Can ye bring me ane frae yer last maister?" "O I aye," returned Jock; and it was agreed that he was to bring the required document to the Sunday, when the farmer intended to drive at one o'clock. At one o'clock punctually Jock arrived at the sun, and with some difficulty made his way into the room where the farmers' ordinary was being held. "Weel, ma laad, have you got your character?" asked the farmer. "Na! but I've got yours an' I'm no comin'!" cried Jock, as he bolted from the room, amid the roars of the assembled company.

A Serious Rehearsal.

An amusing case has just been tried in St. Petersburg. The wife of the secretary to a Russian minister and her daughter were visiting the house of another ministerial official. The son of the latter asked the young lady to go with him into another room, which she did. Shortly afterward the mother hears the young man exclaim, "You shall be mine, or I will kill you!" Her daughter called out as though in great terror, "Have mercy! save me!" The mother ran at once to the adjoining room, where she saw her friend's son embracing her daughter, and apparently under the influence of the feeling expressed by the language he had used. She tore her daughter away from him and from the house, insisting that she would put the law in motion for this insult to her child. Over and over again the daughter tried to explain what had happened, but her mother would hear nothing. She carried out her threat, and the case came before the court. Then, but too late to prevent a most amusing scene, it was explained that the young lady and young gentleman had only been rehearsing a scene in a play in which they were going to perform.

The Indian Situation

WASHINGTON, December 26.—A dispatch was received here to-day from Governor Zulick of Arizona, stating that troops are required in the neighborhood of the San Carlos reservation to protect the Indians on the reservation from a threatened attack by the lawless white element. The dispatch was transmitted to the secretary of war, and by his direction two troops of cavalry and eight companies of infantry have been ordered to proceed at once from San Francisco to such points in Arizona as General Crook, commanding the department of Arizona, may indicate. General Crook was also authorized to increase his Indian scouts by one hundred. Additional troops will be ordered to Arizona.

CHICAGO, December 28.—A special dispatch from El Paso, Texas, says Wyatt Earp, one of the best known men in Arizona, arrived there Sunday from the scene of the recent Indian massacre. In an interview he says the situation in western New Mexico and eastern Arizona is far more serious than has been reported by the newspapers. He declares there is no person living who has an adequate idea of the terrible condition of the inhabitants of the region, of which hundreds have been killed by the Apaches within the past three months. Dozens of families have been massacred in the depths of the territory, and the news of their death has never reached the immediate vicinity of their homes, or been telegraphed to the world. Mr. Earp intends to return to Arizona from El Paso, and he says he will take with him a dozen men who, like himself, have lost relatives by the savages.

Burke and Cleary

CHICAGO, December 28.—Probably the most exciting glove contest ever witnessed in Chicago occurred here to-night, in which Jack Burke of Chicago in three rounds knocked out Mike Cleary of New York. The programme said Marquis of Queensbury rules, skin soft gloves, six rounds. Though Billy Lakeman, master of ceremonies, said the small fry of the programme would be gotten out of the way in short order, it was nearly ten o'clock when the boys of the feathering made their appearance. William Churn of the stock yards had been asked upon as referee. The celebrities appeared simultaneously, and everybody got up and yelled and waving his hat. Professor Tom Chandler of Boston and Captain Dalton applied the seconds to Cleary, while Tom Cleary of Chicago and Jack Slade performed the same service for Burke. The time-keepers were Charlie Benedict and Tom Cleary.

Both men were in prime condition. Burke turned the scale at 165 pounds and Cleary about the same. At exactly 10 o'clock the men faced each other, sparred an instant for opening and a moment later Cleary went down from a terrific back hander from Burke's left which struck him square in the mouth and brought blood. He came up with a smile and attempt on Cleary's part to land on Burke's face. The round closed with Cleary in the right on both sides. When time came up for the third round Burke's left and body work showed in a large contrast to the fine, noticeable whiteness of Cleary's face and physique. Burke's wind was in evidence, and Cleary, pale and scared, rushed fiercely in the exciting beat of Burke's blows, and received a blow that decided the contest.

The New York man fell to the ring as if he had been struck down in his corner, but was politely forced from his corner, falling towards the ropes on his left, and Burke was declared the winner. Cleary left the ring on the New York train on the Erie road for home, and recovered himself after a time and forced Lakeman desperately to the side of the ring. It was seen that the New Yorker was bleeding heavily at his left side, and was supposed to be hurt internally, while his face was cut and collapsed, without a chance. It came on quick as a flash his right arm shot out and Cleary fell like a log. He was on his hunkers, just as Burke behind his left ear and knocked him senseless. "My God, he killed him," some one in the crowd said, and the audience was perfectly still.

Burke stepped up to the fallen man, and when assisted [illegible] seconds, but [illegible] his knees, the [illegible] stepped over and shook hands with his last opponent in the ring amid a [illegible] of the crowd [illegible] with a cheer on Burke, [illegible] seemed as though the platform would be torn to pieces when the champion coolly leaped over the ropes and walked jauntily to his dressing room, every whit as steady as when he came out. Cleary's seconds picked him up and helped him to his dressing room, where he revived in a few minutes.

Since Sorge went to California, after his set to with Sullivan, he has cultivated the offensive use of his right hand, which is believed by many the secret of his remarkable success to-night.

A Fire Calamity

NEWBURYPORT, December 26.—Early this morning fire broke out in Boardman's grocery, Georgetown, and extended to Washington block, Equitable building, Tompkins' bakery and the private residence of G. H. Tenney, all of which were burned, causing a loss of $80,000, partly covered by insurance. Thirteen business places were burned out. During the fire Joseph Bailey, fireman, aged 24, unmarried, and George A. Chase, aged 25, who leaves a widow and child, were both instantly killed, and Charles Williams fatally injured by falling with Clarence M. Clark, baggage master, employed by the Boston & Maine railway, had his left leg badly crushed. The fire is a severe blow to the business interests of the town.

The losses and insurances as far as is known are as follows: Geo. H. Tenney, house and furniture, $20,000, insured for $20,000; Adams block, occupied by M. N. Bartman, grocer, and Charles Davis, billiard hall, $60,000, insurance unknown; Masonic building $10,000, insurance $6,000. This building was occupied by S. L. Pike, grocer, who loses $5000, Internal Cole, clothing, and furniture, goods $5000, no insurance; S. Patten, jeweler, $5000, the Masonic lodge $2,000, insurance $1500. A small building between the two was occupied by C. S. Jewett as a periodical store, who carried $500 insurance. A. J. Noyes, shoe and leather dealer, loses $10,000, partially insured. The losses of the Georgetown National bank and the Georgetown Savings bank are not known. Five thousand dollars in gold and silver which was in the National bank is safe.

The following is a list of those injured. C. Williams, of the steamer company, fell overall, skull fractured and is in a critical condition; A. Hartnett, of the same company, has a scalp wound; Clarence Clark, baggage master of the Boston and Maine depot in Georgetown, leg crushed, is in a critical condition. All the wounded faithful firemen except Clark and Williams are doing well. Yeaton, the other wounded man, may recover. Clark, who was killed, was a clerk in Boardman's store. He was son of Representative M. P. Clark of the Seventh district.

Religious Riots.

DETROIT, December 26.—Another outbreak among Polish parishioners of St. Albertus Catholic church occurred yesterday. Shortly after morning mass more than 4,000 people, about one third of the congregation, were gathered outside the church, discussing the position that Bishop Largess occupies at present, to open the church and serve the troubles by giving back to the people their old pastor, Father Kolasinski. The bishop did not appear, and the vast crowd marched to his residence. A committee was selected to notify him of the congregation's desires, but the inmates refused to admit the committee. The bishop escaped by the rear of the house. When the people learned of the bishop's flight, became violent, and in a threatening manner proceeded to St. Joseph's church, where they supposed the prelate was hidden. When St. Joseph's was reached a rush was made for the door, but it was found locked. About half of the crowd then proceeded homeward, while the others returned to St. Albertus church, where at 3 o'clock the great mob made a sudden savage attack upon the edifice. A large detachment of police remonstrating the officers at the church, they resisted the assault and dispersed the rioters. The police again gathered at the house of Basil Lemkie on St. Auburn avenue. Lemkie at the beginning of the church troubles incensed the adherents of Father Kolasinski. His house was fiercely attacked, but a detachment of police swooped down on the mob and the patrol wagons were soon loaded with prisoners. A large number of rioters were seriously hurt. Some of the men had pistols and attempted to make a stand. Joan Leodowski, one of the principal rioters, was shot dead. This subdued the mob, which then dispersed. It is feared that the rioting will be renewed.

A large crowd assembled about the St. Albertus church this morning, but dispersed before doing any damage.

LATER—The mob is still defying the police, who have yet been unable to disperse them.

A Dynamite Affair.

CHICAGO, December 26.—About 9 o'clock this morning a quart can of peculiar construction was found on Judge Lambert Tree's front porch, 9½ Cass street, by a coachman, who tenderly took it up and carried it into a vacant lot in the rear and started on a run for the Chicago avenue police station. He was fairly white with fright when he reached there, and telling Lieutenant Shepherd what he had found, a can of dynamite and where he had found it, asked that officer to send down and investigate. Officer Adams was sent back with him, and together they took the mysterious can to the lake shore at the foot of Chicago avenue and touched a match to the foot of the dynamite fuse, which was found about the can. The explosion made a terrific noise, which was heard distinctly at the station, and the earth was torn up for several feet. When the can was found it was under a doorway. The fuse was charred at the end, showing that it had been lighted and gone out. The police will investigate the mysterious affair. Judge Tree is now in Brussels, where he went a few months ago as U. S. minister. No motive is known for the attempt to destroy the residence, which was one of the finest in Chicago, and was only completed a year ago. At present it is occupied by General A. C. McClurg.

THE NATIONAL CAPITAL

Speaker Carlisle Getting his Committee Assignments in Shape.

Important Decision to be Made in Naming that on Tariff.

Commissioner Sparks Issues a Circular of Land Orders.

House Committees.

WASHINGTON, December 28.—Speaker Carlisle is about half through with his committees. He has skeletonized the list and has most of his chairmanships settled and assigning the members to the places. The committees he is having the most trouble about are the foreign affairs, labor, and coinage, weights and measures. The Star says it is settled that Mr. Blair is to hold the chairmanship of the coinage and weights and measures but the composition of the committee is giving the speaker much worry. Pressure is being brought to bear by Mr. Blanchard and other silver men to have none but advocates of the silver coinage placed upon it, while on the other hand, great influence is exerted to have it constructed in harmony with the administration. In this way the speaker is subjected to a heavy cross-fire and is very harassed. The secretary of the navy, it is said, will have much to say about the composition of the naval committee; and Mr. Hewitt, it is conceded, will be at the head. A number of others whom Mr. Whitney favors will be placed upon it.

The Fight for Silver.

WASHINGTON, December 28.—The Star this evening says that it is impossible to judge of the strength or weakness of either side of the silver coinage question in the house. Many of the members, it says, are in doubt and the opinion is pretty generally expressed that neither side has a majority as it now stands, and the balance of power is held by those who have not yet made up their minds. The fight will be fought in the doubtful ones, and some compromise measure is likely to come in for a pretty strong support.

Protection for Cleveland.

PITTSBURG, December 28.—The Penny Press, an afternoon paper, to-day publishes a story to the effect that five Pinkerton detectives passed through the city last night from Chicago on the way to Washington for the purpose of looking after the personal safety of President Cleveland. One of the party stated that they were ordered to Washington via Philadelphia, where they were to be joined by five men from the branch agency there, the ten to proceed to Washington for special duty at the White House. On their arrival in the capital they were to be fully instructed as to their duties. One of the men said the reason for this precaution was that they concluded that a plot of some kind had been discovered, "but whether against the president's life or not I am not prepared to state. We expect to remain in Washington some time. Each one of us has a trunk a long." General Sheridan's orderly has visited Pinkerton's headquarters during the past few days several times.

WASHINGTON, December 28.—It is said at the White House that there is no truth in nor any foundation for the story published by the Pittsburg Penny Press, that a number of detectives are coming to Washington to look after the personal safety of the president.

Arctic Relief.

WASHINGTON, December 28.—In response to urgent telegrams from Senator Farr, the secretary of the treasury has decided to send a search party after the missing whaler Amethyst, supposed to have been cast away in the Behring sea. Telegrams were sent Commanders Hooper of the revenue steamer Rush and Healy of the Corwin, at San Francisco, directing them to confer together with a view to the selection of one of those vessels to undertake the search. It is believed the steamer will be ready to sail in four days after decision is made. The Rush is a new vessel, comparatively, but the Corwin is in good repair and only last summer returned from a cruise in the waters where she is supposed the Amethyst is cast away. From advices received from San Francisco it is believed that it will not be possible to force a passage farther north than the Seal islands, between 150 and 200 miles north of Aleutian islands, and well up into Behring seas. The revenue steamer will put in at Ounalaska for coal and such stores as may be needed.

Sparks' New Orders.

WASHINGTON, December 28.—Commissioner Sparks of the land office, in view of the almost universal comment as to his policy, has felt constrained to issue a new series of regulations for registers, receivers and special agents of the land office, which have just been promulgated. They modify on many important particulars his recent sweeping orders. Homestead or pre-emption claimants who have made bona fide settlements upon public land and who are living upon, cultivating and improving the same in accordance with the law, with the intention of acquiring title thereto, shall be permitted to remove from a portion to be cleared for cultivation so much timber as is actually necessary for that purpose, or for buildings, fences or other improvements on the land entered. In clearing for cultivation, should there be surplus timber the entry may dispose of such, but shall not be allowed to deduce the values of timber for the purpose of sale or speculation before title has been conveyed to him by patent.

Children's Christmas

WASHINGTON, December 28.—Fourteen hundred poor children to-day enjoyed the hospitality of that charming charity organization known as the Children's Christmas club, of which Mrs. Vilas, daughter of the postmaster general, is president, and Miss Nellie Arthur, daughter of the ex-president, one of the vice presidents, and which every year furnishes a Christmas dinner and gifts to the children of the poor of this city. Each of the fourteen hundred children was given an excellent dinner and a box of candy and a card. The ladies were waited upon by the daughters of the most prominent citizens, and Miss Mollie Vilas and Miss Nellie Arthur personally superintended the giving out of the presents. The president and Mrs. Cleveland and many other people were known in society attended the entertainment.

Receiving Bids.

WASHINGTON, December 28.—The second assistant postmaster general is receiving bids for carrying the mails on steamboats and star routes in the western states and territories. The time for receiving bids expires on the 2nd of January. At the same time bids for miscellaneous routes in all the states and territories, with the exception of Delaware, Pennsylvania and the New England states, are being received. The territory covered in the first mentioned class of bids comprises Arkansas, Louisiana, Indian territory, Texas, Kansas, Nebraska, Dakota, Wyoming, Montana, Colorado, New Mexico, Arizona, Utah, Idaho, Washington territory, Oregon, Nevada, California and Alaska.

Coon's Authority

WASHINGTON, December 28.—A question has arisen as to the validity of Mr. Coon's acts as acting secretary of the treasury for nine days after the death of Secretary Folger under a former designation of the president to act during the absence of the secretary. It is stated at the first comptroller's office that such a state of affairs might affect Mr. Coon individually were a question of salary involved. Yet his actions towards third parties could not be vitiated. Therefore his official actions cannot be questioned. This position is held under a decision of the supreme court and of a former attorney general.

A Postmaster's Error.

WASHINGTON, December 28.—On account of alleged irregularities in the conduct of his office, the postmaster at Las Lunas, New Mexico, has been recommended for removal. Basing his compensation on the number of stamps sold, instead of the number cancelled, he has received $40.28 in excess of what he was legitimately entitled to receive. This amount has been refunded to the government.

The Markets.

NEW YORK, December 28.—Money on call easy at 2 to 3 per cent; prime paper 4 to 5; foreign exchange quiet at 4 85¼ for 60 days and 4 88½ for demand. The total sales of stocks to-day were 377,578 shares. Government bonds were dull to-day; state bonds were quite active and firmer. There was a moderate business in railway bonds, total sales being $2,791,000. The most active were Erie second consols, with sales of $665,000, and the Atlantic & Pacific issues, East Tennessee issues and Texas & Pacific issues. In most cases prices are higher, but Erie second consols show a loss of ½. Stocks were fairly active and strong at the opening, prices showing gains of ½ to ¾ over the closing prices of Saturday, and in early dealing there were further advances of small fractions in many of the active list. The best prices of the day, however, were made in the morning, and brokers who were conspicuous in carrying the advance of Saturday forward, were active sellers to-day. The result was a slow yielding market from short y after 10 o'clock until late in the day, unaccompanied by any material reactions. In the last hour the market was quiet and dull and comparatively firm, with some feverishness, however, in Lackawanna, and it closed steady at irregular changes but generally from small fractions to nearly 2 per cent lower. The declines over 2 per cent, however, are confined to half a dozen stocks, while some of the less active of the so-called active list show fractional gains, including Texas Pacific, Manitoba and Chicago Southern which are up ½ to ¾. Missouri Pacific shows a gain of ¼ per cent. A conspicuous feature of the market was the strength developed in Lake Shore in early dealings. This stock showed a gain of [illegible] at the opening at 88, and after selling at 87½ rose in the forenoon to 88½. Later it gradually yielded to 87½. Closing higher with a net advance of ¼ per cent. The only active stock that shows a gain over Saturday, St. Paul, is down 1 per cent, after a strong opening, while Northwestern lost only ¼. Lackawanna closed with a net loss of 1½. Jersey Central lost 1¼ and Pacific Mail 1¼ per cent. Other losses were for fractional amounts and generally for less than [illegible] per cent, although Union Pacific is down [illegible] and Western Union ¾ per cent.

The Mail and Express says: Mining shares were dull but strong. Sales: Potosi 20, Plymouth 210, Caledonia Black Hills 42, Bodie 1.55, Sutro 24, California and Virginia 1.50, Leadville 30, Silver King 9, Horn Silver 2.75.

Emperor William's Christmas

BERLIN, December 26.—Emperor William is in the best of health and spirits. He spent Christmas eve in the company of other members of the royal family. On Christmas day he was at the palace of the crown prince, where his imperial majesty presided at the family dinner given by the crown prince. The city presents the usual Christmas week aspect. Squares and streets are literally converted into a forest of pines. Fully 100,000 trees arrived in the city and were sold in the two days preceding Christmas. Emperor William and Empress Augusta received Dr. Finsch, the New Guinea explorer, in the early part of the same day. His majesty will also receive the congratulations of all his generals instead of on New Year's day as usual. Spain has announced her intention of sending a general officer to attend the festivals. The ministry have issued a circular reciting that it is repugnant to the feelings of Emperor William to celebrate the seventy-fifth anniversary of his accession to the throne of Prussia on the second of January next, because it is also the anniversary of the death of his brother and predecessor, Frederick William IV. The festivals therefore postponed until January 30, as previously announced.

Strikers' Deliberations.

PITTSBURG, December 28.—A large mass meeting of striking coal miners is in progress at the Allequippa mines in the second pool. Between 400 and 500 men are in attendance, and more are expected this afternoon. It was decided to present to the coal exchange a proposition to have the troubles settled by arbitration. If this is rejected the strike will be allowed to continue. Committees will visit the mines where men are at work, and make another effort to induce them to join the strike. Speakers advocated peaceable measures.

At the mass meeting of striking coal miners to-day at Allequippa, in the second pool, it was decided to continue the strike for three cents per bushel. A proposition was rejected by the operators, who asserted that the miners would not abide by the umpire's decision if it should be against them. After the meeting the strikers to the number of 500 visited the Allequippa and Coal Valley miners and made an effort to induce the working miners to come out, but they were unsuccessful. A number of deputy sheriffs were present but no trouble occurred. An uneasy feeling prevails to-night, however, as the strikers are still in the vicinity and an outbreak is feared.

Negro Progress

NASHVILLE, December 26.—An immense assemblage of negroes gathered at St. John's colored Methodist Episcopal church on the occasion of the opening of the first exposition given by that race, and as a mark of esteem for Mr. A. M. Langston, late minister to Haiti. Owing to the length of the preliminary exercises, Mr. Langston was not introduced until a late hour. He commenced his address by congratulating the colored people on the progress that has been made since the emancipation proclamation. He drew a comparison between slaves that had been liberated before those of the American continent and said that the American negroes has advanced more in the last 25 years than the others had in their long period of liberty.

Canadian Crisis.

NEW YORK, December 26.—A Hamilton, Ontario, special says: A general election in the dominion has been decided on. Sir John Macdonald fears, it is reported, to meet the house, owing to the hostility of the French in the Riel case and the know edge that when parliament meets ugly revelations of corruption and misgovernment will be laid bare by a committee to be asked for. The convention of Sir John's supporters to arrange a platform to go to the country on will be held on Tuesday next, and a dissolution will be declared as soon as Sir John returns from the other side in January. Much excitement prevails in the province.

A Fearful Leap.

CLEVELAND, December 28.—At noon today an unknown woman jumped from the third floor of the Perry block, in Monumental park, to the street below. Her skull was crushed, and she was terribly injured otherwise. The room from which she sprang was occupied by David Eckart, a Broad street coal dealer. Eckart left the room at 9 o'clock this morning, but the woman evidently remained undetected until a few minutes before she made the dreadful leap. She did not dress herself, but wrapped a blanket about her person, and stepping to the window sprang through head first. The woman was taken to the hospital.

Railroad Collision

PITTSBURG, December 26.—At 2:50 this morning the third section of freight No. 51, on the Panhandle railroad, ran into the rear of the second section at New Philadelphia Cross-roads, wrecking both trains, slightly injuring the fireman, Robert Boats, a brakeman whose name is not learned, and J. J. Wartman, a tramp. Immediately after the collision the wreck took fire and nineteen cars of coke and merchandise were destroyed. Loss $50,000. The cause of the accident is not known.

The French Crisis

LONDON, December 26.—Despatches from Paris say that the premiership of DeBrisson is collapsing, a number of his former staunch supporters having deserted him.

PARIS, December 26.—It is generally understood that the Brisson cabinet will resign and that De Freycinet will form a ministry after the re-election of M. Grevy as president of the French republic, which now appears certain.

Glass Works Starting

WHEELING, W. Va., December 28.—The Buckeye glass works at Martins Ferry, Ohio, which has been idle since last summer on account of the strike, to-day accepted the modified proposition concerning the basis of wages offered by the employees, and preparations for starting were begun at once. The works will be run with a larger force than for the past six years. It is expected that the Belle Vernon works at Bridgeport, Ohio, the only flint glass factory now idle in this district, will also start shortly.

Hamilton County Representatives

CINCINNATI, December 28.—The republican candidates for representatives from Hamilton county have held a meeting and adopted resolutions declaring that while they shall insist that they were legally elected and at the proper time shall present their claims for seats, yet they neither expect to enter the republican caucus for the choice of officers of the house nor do they regard it as compatible with the best interests of the state or party that they should take part in the caucus.

Shot Through the Body.

TOLEDO, December 28.—Albert Painter, proprietor of Lake Windsor, was shot about 4 o'clock this afternoon by A. A. Miller, a bar tender and former employee. The ball entered Painter's right side, passed through his body and lodged in the spine. The wound is serious and may prove fatal. Miller worked for Painter last summer on the steamer Chief Justice Waite. The shooting is the result of a disagreement concerning the pay for services.

The Despised Metal

NEW YORK, December 28.—A well known real estate man of this city, who has many tenants and is of a cautious disposition, said yesterday in speaking of the probability that congress would repeal the compulsory silver coinage act, "I am prepared to have them refuse to repeal. In some leases of property in Sixth avenue which I have just executed I have inserted provisions that the rents shall be paid to me in gold coin."

Missouri Improvement

KANSAS CITY, December 28.—Large numbers of delegates to the Missouri river improvement convention, which meets to-morrow, have just arrived, and nearly all the balance will arrive on the night train. It now seems probable that fully seven hundred delegates will be in attendance. The programme is not fully completed. It will comprise a general discussion of the whole transportation question.

A Widow's Recognition.

CHICAGO, December 28.—Mrs. Jeffie Benner, the widow of the gallant officer who sacrificed his life while endeavoring to relieve the yellow fever sufferers of the lower Mississippi river several years ago, was to-day appointed postmistress of the village of Rogers Park, in the township of Evanston, this county, where she has resided since the death of her husband.

A Woman's Fall.

CLEVELAND, December 28.—About noon to-day Mary Dawd, a grass widow, whose husband lives in New York, threw herself from the third floor of the Tracy block in Monumental park, and was so badly injured that she will die. She fell a distance of 28 feet. For six months she has been living in the block with Daniel Eckart, a prominent retail coal dealer.

Married Without Knowing It.

NEW YORK, December 26.—The supreme court to-day denied the motion of Mrs. Mary Kittson, otherwise Minnie Clark, for alimony and counsel fees in suit brought by her for separation from [illegible] Kittson, to whom she claims she was married in April last. Kittson claims that he has no knowledge of the marriage and that it must have taken place when he was drunk.

Dreadful Punishment.

MOBILE, Ala., December 28.—Yesterday afternoon at Gainestown, Clear county, Ala., Alexander Reid, a negro, who brutally murdered Miss Carrie Boyer at that place on the 18th inst., was chained to a tree at the spot where the crime was committed and slowly burned to death by a crowd of incensed whites and blacks.

Sharon vs. Hill.

SAN FRANCISCO, December 26.—United States Circuit Judge Sawyer this morning rendered a decision in favor of plaintiff in the suit of Sharon vs. Hill, brought to declare void the alleged marriage contract.

progress of the other industries of the state. The coal output for 1885 is larger than in any previous year. The most reliable statistics to date give a safe estimate of the year's coal product at 1,500,000 tons. This is the estimate made by State Inspector of Mines McNeil. Mr. Frederick Cushman, who collects such statistics for the government's use, estimates the total output for 1885 to be 1,200,000. An average of these two estimates would place the output at 1,375,000. For 1884 the coal output was 1,134,271 tons, and for 1883, 1,220,[illegible] tons. The output for 1883 was greater than that of 1884, for the reason that during 1884 there was a protracted strike among the miners, which materially essayed the working of the mines.

It is estimated that the coal mines of Colorado have a capacity of 3,000,000 tons annually. During the past few years new mines have been opened up in all quarters of the state. Three new mines have been opened up in Boulder county with a combined capacity of 1,000 tons daily, and two extensive mines have been opened in El Paso county, each of which have been supplied with the most modern machinery. The coal is mined exclusively by machinery operated by compressed air. One of these mines is owned by the Denver & New Orleans railway, and has a capacity of 1,000 tons daily. The other is owned by capitalists in this city, and has a capacity of 300 tons daily. La Plata county has new mines, located near Durango, capable of outputting 600 tons daily. A new mine near Canon City has a capacity of 400 tons daily, and a new mine in Montrose county, with a vein 30 feet thick, has almost an unlimited capacity. Numerous other mines have been opened in various parts of the state.

There are five thousand persons employed in the coal mines of Colorado, and probably as many more people are indirectly engaged in the industry.

The numerous strikes among the coal miners of Colorado have materially essayed the output. A strike is now pending at the Louisville mines, and it has been in progress for months. These mines, when in operation, output about 400 tons daily. The other large producing mines which have been closed for the year are the Northrop, West and Marshall. During the strike in the Union Pacific's mines in Wyoming, that company bought 100,000 tons from the Colorado Coal & Iron company, and this partially made up for the loss to the output occasioned by the closing down of the Louisville, Northrop and Marshall mines.

IRON MINING AND MANUFACTURE.

Extensive discoveries are being made yearly to the iron mines of the state. The works of the Colorado Coal and Iron company at Pueblo are the largest in the west, and to that company is due the credit of building up that great industry of the state. The company has many important mines in the state, and the works at Pueblo give employment to hundreds of men. The mountains are full of iron ore, the western counties of the state being profuse of iron deposits.

The output of the Colorado Coal and Iron company at Pueblo for 1885 is the best indication of the industry in Colorado. These figures are as follows:

Pig iron	[illegible]	Net tons
Iron castings	[illegible]	"
Cast-iron pipe	[illegible]	"
Merchant bar iron and hammered rails.	[illegible]	"
Steel rails	[illegible] gross	tons

Petroleum.

The first oil spring in the state was discovered in 1861, on the banks of Oil creek, about six miles from Canon City in Fremont county. A company was organized in 1865, with the aid of a small crude refinery. 1,000 gallons of surface oil was taken from a well about twenty feet in depth. Little was done, however, until 1878, when the present known oil basin, covering territory from twenty to twenty-five miles in diameter, was prospected. The census report says the oil is superior to the Franklin oil of Pennsylvania, and equal to the Necco oil of Ohio. Oil is also found in Huerfano, Chaffee and Routt counties. The following are the statistics of the census on this subject:

Number of wells	[illegible]
Number of dry holes	[illegible]
Number of flows	[illegible]
Cost of wells	[illegible]

Railroads and Telegraph.

The following facts are taken from the state census of 1885:

There are nine broad gauge roads, with a mileage of 1,120.30 miles, and seven narrow gauge roads with a mileage of 1,753.04 miles, making a total of 2,872.34. The indebtedness of these companies is $[illegible],237,295 and total assets $[illegible]. The receipts for the year are given, $4,[illegible],280.57, the expenses for the year are given, $40,617,922.19, a net gain of $5,280,358.38. Other interesting statistics show that 977 locomotives, 507 passenger and 25,335 other cars are required to transact the railroad business of the state. This industry alone employs in the state [illegible],669 persons.

The total mileage traffic is put down at [illegible],298,[illegible] miles, the number of passengers carried during the year at 3,905,[illegible], and an average price per mile less than four cents. 4,641,741 tons is the gross freight total for the year. The report gives forty-one killed and [illegible] injured by railroad accidents during the year.

The total length of lines of the Western Union Telegraph company in the state is [illegible] miles, or 7,[illegible] miles of wires.

Sheep.

El Paso still maintains its record for being the largest wool growing county in the state, its flocks numbering 11,000 more than Lake, the county which ranks second. It can be said that the year 1885 has been a comparatively successful one for wool growing, which is one of the most important industries of the county. In 1884, according to the figures on the assessor's books, the county had 111,577 sheep, valued at $140,610, while the records for 1885 show 114,158, valued at $114,185. While the number has increased by over 3,000 it will be noticed that the valuation has decreased to the amount of $26,125. This can be accounted for from the fact that in 1884 sheep were assessed at $1.50 per head, and in 1885 only $1 per head. This decrease alone makes a difference of about $50,000.

During the past year it is safe to estimate that fully 15,000 sheep have been driven out of this county to other ranges.

The year, like it in every respect, has been a very favorable one for the wool grower. Last winter and spring were not very severe and the losses either from the weather or disease have been very large, to the contrary comparatively small. Frequent rains during the summer months made the grazing extraordinarily good, and the pleasant weather during the past few months place the sheep in excellent condition. Few of the owners have had their herds affected with the scab, but in almost every instance precaution was taken to prevent its communication to other flocks, and the utmost efforts made to eradicate it as speedily as possible. Many of the sheep owners in this county have made sheds for the protection of their sheep in severe weather. Also productive hay lands, from which they gather crops sufficient, in case of emergency, for protection, it is claimed, makes the sheep more valuable, and places them in better condition to raise their lambs. There seems to be a diversity of opinion as to lambing yield for 1885. Some claim that it was above, others that it was below the average. In some instances, owners had a remarkable to lease while others were very much disappointed. The wool clip, however, was up to the standard. The assessor's books give it as 480,150 pounds as against [illegible],[illegible] pounds in 1884, thus showing a marked decrease. In the Denver & Rio Grande report it will be seen that 1,[illegible] pounds were shipped from this station. Allowing that 400,000 pounds came from outside sources the wool product of the county for 1885 was 8[illegible],000 pounds. The prices received do not differ materially from those received in 1884.

The census statistics of 1885 and for the year ending June 1st give the following figures:

Cattle.

During the year 1885 statistics show that there has been a perceptible increase in the cattle business in the county, and the number of cattle on the ranges exceeds by several thousand the number in any previous year. Starting out with 18[illegible] the assessor's books show that there were 4,[illegible]45 cattle in the county. This number kept increasing gradually until 1871, when the number was given at 26,8[illegible]4. From this time until 1875 there was a decrease, until 1876, when there was a slight gain. In 1879 the county was credited with having 24,[illegible] head of cattle, but there was a decrease from that time until 1882, when we had only 17,[illegible]8. Since 1882 there has been a continued increase. In 1884 the valuation of cattle was $[illegible],300 and in 1885 $[illegible], an increase of $84,735. In 1885, $[illegible], an increase of $84,785. Averaging the price per head at $25, which is considered less by $5 than the most of the range owners would be willing to sell at to-day, we find that there is invested in the cattle industry about $750,000.

In conversation with Mr. Bertram Gilpin one of the most extensive cattle owners in the county, a representative of the GAZETTE was told that the cattle industry in the county had settled down on a firm basis, and that the owners had the very brightest of prospects. The cattle on the ranges, he said, had the best of grazing during the greater part of the year, and were in the best of shape to weather a severe winter should we have one. Another very noticeable fact was that the grade of cattle in the county was rapidly increasing to a better standard. Within the past year many owners had brought into the county thoroughbred stock, and would continue to do so every year. More cattle had been brought into the county yearly until the available ranges were pretty well monopolized.

As a whole it can be said that the season of 1885 has been a very favorable and profitable one for the cattle growers of El Paso county, and should the remainder of the winter be mild, their prospects are as good as could be wished for for 1886.

County Development.

There has been much development and improvement in the rural districts of the county during the past year, especially on the Divide. In 1880 the county statistics put with a pre-emptor or locator acreage of 66,619 acres, valued at $118,21[illegible], which has gradually increased up to the present time, when we can boast of 310,142 acres valued at $893,745.

The past year we learn by looking over the assessor's book that there have been more actual sales of agricultural and grazing lands than for several years past, and in almost every instance good prices were commanded. Much valuable property must have been either entered or pre-empted as it is shown by the assessor's books that there is an increase in the county acreage of 18,229 acres over 1884, and an increase in valuation of $2[illegible], [illegible] 8[illegible]5. In an agricultural way there has been almost phenomenal improvement. In 1885 there was but 12,274 acres under irrigation, whereas statistics give us 6,50[illegible] in 1885. The Divide section which is gaining the reputation of having the most productive soil in the state has experienced considerable of a boom in some localities, and has almost doubled in value, and the crops have been so bountiful that the ranchmen feel very much encouraged and better off financially than for several years past. In the Fountain valley irrigable lands have increased materially in value, and there having been more rain than usual during the year, the owners of ranches there also consider that they have had a fortunate and prosperous season. We are unable to arrive at any very careful estimate of the agricultural product of the county beyond that prepared and forwarded to the department of agriculture by the assessor in the latter part of September. This report was as follows, and in near every item shows a good increase over 1884.

CEREALS.

	Acres	Bushels
Wheat	149	7,8[illegible]
Oats	2,475	61,[illegible]
Barley	2[illegible]6	4,935
Rye	79[illegible]	9,608
Corn	941	8,430
Buckwheat	13	5[illegible]
Potatoes	1,457	84,[illegible]

HAY.

	Acres.	Tons
Timothy	92	658
Clover	1	5[illegible]
Alfalfa	471	1,1[illegible]
Native grass	7,489	7,091

This table does not show exactly the product of 1885, but will give somewhat of an idea as to how the county is progressing in an agricultural way.

FRUITS.

Year after year it is being more thoroughly demonstrated that nearly all kinds of fruit can be successfully raised in El Paso county. In earlier days the idea of growing fruit in this section was derided at, but a few, who some years ago began experimenting, now have productive and flourishing vines and fruit trees, and others are annually embarking in the business. During this last fall more fruit trees were brought into Colorado Springs from eastern nurseries than in any previous year, and now that the people who own suitable lands have become convinced that fruit can be successfully raised in this county more and more trees, vines and shrubs will be set out every year. Not until 1883 were any estimates made as to the amount of fruit grown in the county, and then they were prepared by Mr. A. A. McGovney as best he could with the facilities that he had at command. During the past two years, however, blanks space has been provided on the tax schedules for these statistics. In order to show the rapidity with which the fruit product of the county is increasing we give below a table showing the figures for the two years:

	1884	1885
Apples, bushels	2[illegible]	4[illegible]
Pears, bushels	1[illegible]	9
Gooseberries, quarts	1,[illegible]	1,2[illegible]
Currants, quarts	15	8,4[illegible]
Strawberries, quarts	7,500	8,410

It will thus be seen that El Paso is making marked progress in the way of cultivating small fruits.

LIVE STOCK AND PRODUCTIONS.

In the census statistics for 1885 the following table which is of considerable interest is given:

Horses of all kinds	4,[illegible]
Mules and asses	106
Working oxen	2
Milch cows	1,257
Other cattle	11,[illegible]
Calves	6,521
Cattle purchased	5,809
Cattle sold	2,949
Cattle slaughtered	211
Cattle died, strayed and stolen	1,[illegible]
Milk sold, gallons	53,955
Butter made, pounds	9,526

CENSUS FIGURES.

In the way of agricultural statistics the census report credits El Paso county with having 1[illegible]7 acres of improved land. Of this, 31,422 acres is tilled—175,915 acres pasture land. The unimproved land is put down at 162,544 acres divided into wood and other lands. Farm implements, fences, and other buildings are valued at $2,155,370, the stock at $1,462,426 and improvements and machinery at $65,150. This report shows that in 1884 the building and repairs to fences amounted to $26,167, cost of fertilizers $[illegible], amount paid out to laborers for wages and board in 1884 $40,30[illegible]. Estimated value of all farm products $422,27[illegible].

Coal Mining.

Underlying the county almost its whole width are extensive strata of coal, but not until within the last two or three years has much work been done in the mining of coal for the market. For years, however, coal of inferior quality has been dug from outcropping veins and used by the ranchmen. Five years ago the Wilson banks were opened up. The shaft, however, was not sunk to a very great depth and the property was worked very irregularly. Shortly after the completion of the Denver & New Orleans railway the Franceville banks were opened and have been operated with considerable success ever since until lately, when a cave in the mine compelled the suspension of work. A new incline is now being worked upon. Regardless of this interruption the mine shipped during the first six months of the year on an average of twenty carloads of coal per day, and during the past three months about ten cars per day. Next year the company expects to be in condition to produce a better quality and a much larger quantity of coal. Late last year a company was organized for the opening up of a coal vein just north of the city. This property is known as the El Paso banks. A complete plant of machinery for the operation of the mine was placed in position and for several months the mine was operated. This year only very little work has been done and we have been unable to obtain any figures as to the output.

This year Judge C. A. B. McFerran has opened up a new mine about eight miles east of Colorado Springs which is producing a quality of coal superior to any county coal previously placed on the market. The improvements on the mine are a shaft 50 feet in depth which taps a vein of coal nine feet and six inches in thickness. A boiler including engine, boiler, hoisting and pumping apparatus, screens and other necessary fixtures and outbuildings has been established. The property has been in operation only about two months. The present capacity is about 100 tons per day with an output of about fifty tons. In the two months that the mine has been operated about 3000 tons have been disposed of, and in every instance it has given good satisfaction. It is being used by a large number of people including the Miners and other large consumers.

By a very careful canvass we find that the consumption of coal in the county for the past year was very large, and if a mine of superior quality of coal could be opened up in the county it would be of not a little benefit to it, and the poultry products market. Jenkins & Co. estimate that they have handled 3,5 carloads. Bacon & Carr estimate that they have handled 200 carloads, and Lennox Bros. show, by actual figures, that they have disposed of 625 carloads averaging about [illegible] tons to the car. Of this amount, 700 tons only was hard coal. Mr. McFerran, as former estimated, has sold 2,000 tons. Mr. J. W. Greene, of Manitou, shows by his books that he has disposed of 145 carloads of coal during the year, an increase of 40 cars over 1884. This show that there has been 16,700 tons of coal consumed in this county. This result is obtained by averaging broad gauge cars at 16 tons and narrow gauge cars at 10 tons.

Below we are enabled to turn all some statistics taken from the census report of 1885. The figures as given are for the year ending June, 1885.

COAL MINES.

Capital invested	$115,000
Acres worked	20
Men disabled for more than a week	2
Maximum capacity in tons	119,300
Average number of men employed	177
Value of explosives	$1,5[illegible]
Value of other materials	$[illegible]
Product, tons	60,[illegible]
Value of product	$100,700

Plaster Paris.

Perhaps the most important manufactory in the county is that of the Stucco and Cement company, formerly the Colorado Springs Plaster Paris company, whose works are situated in Colorado City. They supply Colorado and Wyoming with almost all the plaster paris used, have sold during the past year 805,000 pounds, which is a large increase over the output of the preceding year. Notwithstanding the large amount of work turned out the capacity of their factory is such that double the amount could be handled. The company have, within the last year commenced the manufacture of cement from material found in great abundance within a short distance of their mill. They have discovered a new method of manufacturing a cement as heavy as the English Portland. During the coming year they expect to manufacture a cement in every way equal to the Portland, and at a less price than the cheap Custer cement is sold at here in Colorado. Besides the material for cement and plaster paris the company have made the important discovery that they have upon their premises a large vein of fire clay.

Quarries.

Up to the present year there has been considerable work done in the quarries of El Paso county of which there are a number of very good ones. This year, however, only enough to supply the home demand has been quarried. The state census report for 1885 for the year ending June 1st, 1885, states that there is invested in quarries in El Paso county $2,800, average number of hands employed 25, wages paid $4,500, cubic yards stone 3,000, value $5,200.

Population of El Paso County.

The census of 1885 gives some very interesting facts regarding our population in El Paso county. The population of the county in 1870 was 987, in 1880 7919 and in 1885, 8356. The population by races is as follows:

Schools.

It is shown by the report of the county superintendent of schools that El Paso county has twenty-eight organized school districts and a school population of 2114, an increase of about 75 over the number in 1884. There are enrolled in the graded schools 880 and in the ungraded schools 730. During the year the average daily attendance has been [illegible],20, an increase of 223 over 1884. There are employed in the county 39 teachers in all, 6 male and 33 female. The former receive on an average $[illegible].50 per month and the latter $66¾. This is in the graded schools, while in the ungraded the average for males is $ 8.65, for females $42.81.

In 1884 the county had 31 schools, this year 32, the valuation of which including sites, furniture, &c., is estimated at $7,870. During the year school bonds to the amount of $20,000 were redeemed, leaving outstanding $25,000. No new indebtedness has however been created.

Manitou.

It can be said without exaggeration that Manitou during the year 1885 has experienced a season of unprecedented prosperity, and on every side are evidences of steady growth at the present time, to say nothing of the prospects for 1886 which are very bright. During the year 1885 there were many buildings erected, and some very extensive improvements made by the city, such as the planting of trees, extension of sewers, etc. [illegible] to Manitou a GAZETTE representative visited a number of the most prominent business men, including Mayor M. A. Leedy, Postmaster J. W. Greene, Hon. C. W. Barker, Max Weniger, A. L. Williams, Charles Pollen and others. They all looked upon the past season as being one of the most prosperous ever experienced, and felt very much encouraged as to the future. They are all heavy property owners and are well qualified to judge. During the height of the season the hotels were all crowded, and every available cottage occupied. It is also a well-known fact that, since January of the past year, the facilities for the accommodation of guests has been materially increased, including the opening of the Iron Springs hotel, and a half a dozen large and roomy boarding houses. The hotel first mentioned was well filled during the summer months and is now accommodating a large number of winter guests, while the boarding houses all boast of having received liberal patronage during the season. We hope to be able to give approximate statistics of the number of guests accommodated during the year at the various hotels, but were unable to do so from the fact that three of the principal hotels were closed and we could not find any one who could give even a rough estimate. It is very generally conceded that notwithstanding the fact that the season was short and confined to the months of June, July and August, that the amount of business done for that period far exceeds that of any previous year. To give an idea of the amount of travel in and out of Manitou during these three months, we are told by Mr. Pollen, the agent of the Denver & Rio Grande, that 10,000 pieces of baggage were checked during that time, an amount equal to 110 pieces a day. A better idea of the passenger and freight business done at this station will be given in tabular form.

The hotel and boarding house business is acknowledged to be one of the utmost importance to Manitou, but outside of this the town has had a very healthy and substantial growth, and real estate has increased from ten to fifteen per cent in value. During the past two months there has been a good demand for choice business and well located properties, and many transfers have been made, especially in the business portion of the city. A number of the purchasers contemplate erecting buildings at once.

In our New Year's edition of 1884 we devoted considerable space to the purchase made by the Iron Spring company and the contemplated improvements. At that time they thought of expending $50,000, and have fulfilled their promises to that amount with $50,000 more added. Early this summer this company opened their new hotel on which improvements to the amount of $20,000 had been made, thus giving Manitou one of the most modern hostelries that it has ever had. In addition to the cottages built in 1884 this company has an electric plant and new cottages.

Another improvement now in progress which will be of material importance to Manitou is the addition of a third story to the Barker house. This addition will give Mr. Barker twenty-five additional rooms, all large and airy, dining room with a seating capacity of over one hundred people, capacious office with cheerful reading room, barber shop and wash room attached. The improvements now under way will give Mr. Barker one of the best houses in Manitou and one much improved in appearance.

A movement is now on foot to have the streets of Manitou lighted by electricity and there is but little doubt that it will be put in operation before the summer season of 1886 opens. Mr. [illegible] Brown, the representative of the Thompson-Houston system, is now there arranging for the establishment of the plant. The town board has appropriated $[illegible],000 towards lighting the streets with arc lights.

In and about Manitou are some very valuable stone quarries, but they have not been operated very extensively during the past year, except as occasion demanded. The prospects are, however, that during the next year more stone will be turned out, more particularly paving stone, from Mr. Greene's quarry.

Snyder Bros., proprietors of the Manitou mills, have kept up work almost continuously during the year, working about 12 men. The lime which they produce is of an excellent quality, and Agent Pollen's books show that they have shipped about 75 carloads during the past year—to say nothing of the tonnage consumed by the home trade.

After a very careful canvass of the town we are enabled to give the following list of buildings erected and improvements made during the past year together with the valuation.

M. V. Rector, barn on Pawnee avenue cost 250

It will thus be seen that Manitou has made a remarkably good showing in the way of building for the year 1885, the total amount footing up to $78,800, a decided increase over 1884.

MANITOU POSTOFFICE.

Postmaster J. W. Greene of Manitou reports a large increase of business for the year 1885, in fact he says that the office has handled more mail than ever before in any one year. About [illegible] money orders have been issued and paid since January 1, 1884, amounting to $[illegible],000. The general business of the other departments amounted to about $2000, making a total of $[illegible],000. The number of letters and postages registered was [illegible].

Building Statistics.

The amount of building done during the past year is very encouraging. Very little building was done in 1884, so that comparison with that year is useless. Colorado College.

Colorado College enters upon the new year under more auspicious circumstances than those which surrounded it at the beginning of 1885. The financial embarrassments under which it was then heavily laboring have been in large measure removed. The faith, pluck, patience and tact which Professor Marden has manifested in soliciting funds to meet the current expenses of the college have met with a good degree of success. Under the capable management of Prof. Scott, the educational work has been conducted with marked efficiency. The attendance of students has been beyond expectation. The enrollment in the metallurgical department in particular is this winter twice as large as a year ago. A new mining department is about to be added which will increase the efficiency of the work in this department. The Pro-Ex literary society has started a college paper called the [illegible] and has been started and has returned a warm welcome. A reading room is about to be added to the attractions of the college. Two new instructors have been employed during the year, Miss Wickard, who resigned a position in the high school and took the place made vacant by the departure of Miss Kies, and Professor Walker, who is filling the place of Professor Shelton, who was granted leave of absence for one year. Both these teachers have shown themselves valuable accessories to the corps of instruction. Some additions have been made to the curriculum during the year, notably the opening of classes in civil engineering and mechanical drawing, and generally increased attention paid to theme writing and oratory. The general morals of the college during the year have been excellent, a result due alike to the manliness and womanliness of the students and to the tact of the management. It is probable that no institution can show more cordial and happy relations between faculty and students. The college prayer meeting has been well sustained and an unconstrained, genuine Christian atmosphere has been characteristic of the college life.

A year ago the continuance of the college was in some minds a matter of doubt. To-day all uncertainty of that sort is removed. The generosity of its friends in Colorado Springs and at the east has made the continuance of the college sure and warrants the hope of a prosperity which henceforth will increase steadily. Colorado Springs, as all will agree, is the most desirable location in the state for a college. As the population of the Centennial state increases, the number of students will steadily multiply and the scope of the instruction will steadily widen. Its greatest and pressing need is money. Prof. Marden has initiated the scheme of asking 100 persons to agree to give $100 each month for five years to come, thus securing an annual income of $10,000 a year for the five years (ending 1890), by which time it is hoped that permanent endowments for most, if not all, the chairs may be secured. By indefatigable effort he has secured 50 such pledges, or in other words, $5,000 a year for five years to come is assured. The greater part of this money has come from generous New Englanders. One citizen, recently come to Colorado Springs, has taken two of these $100 pledges; another recent citizen has taken another, one other citizen a fourth. At least a dozen such subscriptions should be made in our county and as many more in other parts of the state.

The college is Christian in its spirit but unsectarian in its management and appeals to the liberality of all classes of citizens. It is deemed to be a potent factor in shaping the future prosperity of our city. A selfish regard to business interests no less than a spirit of generosity should move our people to subscribe generously to the support of this institution permanently planted among us. We endowed now the college ought to have five years from now two hundred students whose residence here would do not a little to promote the prosperity of Colorado Springs.

The Deaf Mute Institute.

This institute, which was established some 11 years ago, is supported by the state, for the purpose of educating the mute and blind children of the state who, by their misfortune, cannot be instructed in the schools for children possessing all their faculties. The institution has fulfilled its mission when it has educated these children to an extent equal to that obtained by children of normal faculties through the instrumentality of the public schools of the state. To accomplish this end much time and patience need to be exercised by trained specialists in these peculiar fields of instruction, and a building provided in which pupils may be assembled from their homes in various parts of the state in order to receive instruction at a minimum of expense. The state of Colorado is abreast with her sister states in provision for this branch of her educational system, and by law has had an edifice built and equipped and provided for the support of the mute and blind at this institution. The general management is under the control of a board of trustees—five in number, residents of the state. The administration of the affairs of the institution is entrusted to competent and experienced officers and teachers, who are familiar with the methods employed in instructing the mute and the blind.

During the past year improvements have been made on the house and grounds amounting to over $1,000, and the course of study enlarged so as to include instruction in carpentry and cooking. There are 38 mute and 10 blind scholars upon the roll, making a total of 57, which is an increase of 10 over last year. A watchman, provided with a watchman's time detector, is on duty all night, thus greatly diminishing the danger of fire. This has never been done until the present year. Articulation or visible speech is taught to some of the pupils by Mrs. Whitcomb. Only a few can learn this, as it requires a quick eye, retentive memory and perseverance.

It is the aim of the institute so to educate the pupils partaking of its benefits that they may, on finishing the course, be able not only to communicate intelligently with persons with whom they are thrown, but successfully to follow some certain branch of handicraft as well. The trades of printing and carpentry are now taught and other trades will be introduced, as the number of pupils and the means at hand will justify. The girls are instructed in sewing, cooking and general housekeeping.

The corps of instructors is as follows: D. C. Dudley, A. M., superintendent, L. M. Barbett, Mrs. A. O. Whitcomb, Mrs. C. C. Wynn, E. C. Campbell, Miss Isabel Palmer, Miss M. E. Churchman, Miss Abby Whitcomb, Miss M. Barbett, Samuel Gibbs.

D. & R. G. Report

The report of the business transacted by the Denver & Rio Grande railway company at this station during the year 1885 as furnished us by Mr. J. M. From Thursday's Daily.

Mr. C. W. Cobart, of Cheyenne, formerly editor of the Republic, is in the city.

Conductor C. D. Robinson, of the Denver & Rio Grande was in the city yesterday.

Ralph Freudenberg and Prince Wells, the bicyclists, took in the Garden of the Gods and Manitou yesterday.

Prof. Streby and wife, Prof. D. C. Dudley of the Deaf Mute institute, and County Superintendent of Schools B. A. P. Eaton left for Denver on the Tauncerbolt yesterday morning to attend the annual meeting of the State Teachers' association now in session there.

Those who have seen Mentzer and Heath's minstrels tell us that we can expect a big treat at the opera house on New Year's night.

Amie Harbor, the six year old daughter of W. V. Hector of Manitou, died very suddenly yesterday morning. No time has yet been set for the funeral.

Rev. A. W. Arundel went to Denver via the Denver & New Orleans yesterday afternoon, where he was to deliver a lecture last night before the State Teachers' association.

Manager McCreery is negotiating with the female polo club for a game with local players at the rink next Wednesday night. This will be one of the biggest attractions that the rink has had for some time.

Messrs. Fliedberg and Wells gave another of their remarkable performances at the rink last night. Although they did not seem to work as smoothly as they did on the opening evening, they gave general satisfaction.

Mr. Warren of Fountain, who was in the city yesterday, was kicked by a vicious horse and had his left shoulder dislocated. He received immediate medical attention and the operation of resetting the shoulder was a very painful one.

The Antlers Arrivals—Charles Cavender, Leadville; A. B. Crosby, Detroit, Mich.; A. Paul, New York; F. D. Parker, Denver; W. N. McDermon, Kansas City; C. R. Bell, Denver; A. B. C. Lucas, St. Louis; T. W. Lee and wife, Denver.

Mr. J. W. Greene has a quarry opened up at Manitou containing a very excellent quality of hanging stone, similar to that shipped here from the northern part of the state. Mr. Greene will, we understand, guarantee to lay it at a very moderate price.

Mr. O. Palmer, who has been the agent of the Denver & Rio Grande Express company in this city for seven years, will retain a position in the consolidated office, at Denver, for the present. When the companies came to a conclusion to consolidate the question arose as to which of the agents in the different ponting towns, Leadville, Gunnison, Pueblo, Colorado Springs, Salt Lake City, etc., were to have charge of the consolidated office. It was decided to draw lots, and Mr. Pierce was fortunate enough to win and Mr. Palmer unfortunate enough to lose. No reflection can be cast on Mr. Palmer, as it is well known that he has made an honest, reliable and industrious agent.

STATE ENGINEER'S REPORT.

What Mr. Nettleton Has Been Doing During the Past Year.

State Engineer Nettleton has made his annual report to Governor Eaton of the work of his department during the past year. The report is as follows:

The work of the past year has been greatly restricted, by the small appropriation made for this office by the last general assembly. As the appropriation was not large enough to permit of systematic field work during the whole of the two years it was intended to cover, I have thought it best to restrict the work of the past year and endeavor to make the work of 1886 the more effective.

Since entering upon the duties of this office a large part of the field work has been directed to obtain accurate data as to the amount of our water supply, and the capacity of the canals which distribute it. This work has been continued during the past year, the work embracing the gauging of canals on the Platte and Cache la Poudre rivers, and on Bear, Clear and Boulder creeks. A complete daily and hourly record of the water discharged by the Cache la Poudre river has also been kept. It was the intention to have gauged all the canals on each of the streams mentioned, thus making a complete record of the water diverted; but the inability or failure of some of the canal owners to construct suitable measuring weirs prevented its fulfilment.

For every canal measured, a table was prepared, giving the quantity of water passing over the measuring weir for every tenth of a foot increase in depth, beginning with zero and extending to the greatest depth measured. Copies of these tables have been furnished to the canal superintendents and to the water commissioner of the district in which the canal is situated. These tables are intended to be a guide in the division of water, and have already proved of great service. Not only do they enable the water commissioner to perform his duties with greater ease and certainty, but they inspire confidence in the justice and accuracy of his work, and lead to a cordial acceptance of his decision as final. To this, in a great measure, I attribute the peaceful adjustment of all difficulties arising from the division of water during the past year. While in almost every district in the state the services of the water commissioner have been rigorous, the absence of controversies has been in gratifying contrast to some of the occurences of former years.

During the autumn I made an examination on the Cache la Poudre river of the amount of water returned to the stream by percolation. * * * * The results showed that the volume of the stream was increased over 77 per cent. by this source. This increase is the surplus of good times, reappearing to augment the supply during the period of greatest need. It requires no argument to show the economic value and importance of this action. It not only extends the area which a stream will irrigate, but also renders the water supply more uniform throughout the year. As this subject is likely to prove of great importance in the development of our agricultural resources, I hope to pursue the investigation in other localities in the near future.

The development of the agricultural resources of the state during the past year has been most gratifying. The amount of public land entered for settlement has exceeded that of any previous year in our history. In the southern part of the state some of the most important irrigation enterprises in the state have been completed, while others equally large have been inaugurated. If the development of this section continues to be as rapid as during the past year, the time will be short until the value of its agricultural products equals that of the north. I hope during the coming year to give this section the attention which its importance deserves and more than has hitherto been possible.

Throughout the whole of the past year the working of our irrigation system has been such as to encourage confidence at home and respect abroad. That any system of laws regulating so important an interest could be formed and carried into effect without working some discomfort in individual cases is not to be expected. But that it is working well upon the whole is abundantly testified by the absence of opposition and the hearty acquiescence in the results.

As bearing on this subject I will quote the conclusion of the royal commissioner sent from Austria to this country to examine our irrigation system and practices. The report made after personal visits to California, Colorado and the Territories, says:

"The laws of Colorado are most successful and may be adopted the first place. It is not surprising, therefore, that in mileage of canals or acreage irrigated, Colorado more than doubles any other state, and its works are the greatest, most permanent and most rapidly extending."

From Wednesday's Daily.

Dr. B. P. Anderson and wife returned yesterday from their Christmas visit to St. Louis.

Mr. Bernard Gilpin leaves for the east to-day with the expectation of remaining away about two months.

Tramps are becoming quite numerous and a number of them apply at police headquarters every night for shelter.

Amended articles of incorporation have been filed in the county clerk's office by the Powder River Live Stock company.

As will be seen by a notice in another column the annual meeting of the stockholders of the Rose Silver Mining company will be held in this city on January 18, 1886.

Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Bartlett will entertain all those who took part in the "Mikado" at the opera house, on Christmas, at their rooms this evening. All interested are invited.

Arrivals at the Antlers—J. G. White, Leadville; M. A. Bailey, Fairplay, Colo.; G. E. Elliott, A. A. McKnight, A. P. Sweetser, A. W. Evans, Denver; M. A. DeCoursey, Colorado Springs; G. W. Burk, Alma, Colo.

In case the Pueblo opera house is not opened in time the chances are that we will have the Milan opera company here for two nights. This will certainly be a rare treat for our music-loving people. They will probably open in "Il Trovatore."

A consolidation has again been effected between the Denver & Rio Grande and Pacific Express companies, to take effect on January first. The office will be in the room now occupied by the Denver & Rio Grande express. Mr. C. F. Pearce, the present agent of the Pacific, will be the local agent for the consolidated companies.

Several carloads of paving stone from the Longmont quarries were received in the city yesterday. The stone will be used by Mr. Washington Pastorius in paving the sidewalks in front of the four buildings owned by him on Tejon street. If others would do the same thing they would not have to pay paving assessments every two years, costing in the long run more than stone.

Monday evening being the occasion of the wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Richards a number of their friends assembled at the residence of D. B. Fairley and proceeded in a body to the residence of Mr. and Mrs. W. A. R. The lord and lady being absent the intruders took possession and were doing high carnival when the host and hostess returned, much surprised. However they were not disposed to turn the rascals out, so the evening was spent in a very enjoyable manner, vocal and instrumental music and games being the order of the evening. Knowing Mr. Richards' connection with the Big Horn country an imaginary map of the country in connection with a surveyor's transit and outfit was presented him. As they cannot be described, suffice it to say they were original and comical and have to be seen to be appreciated. Among those present were O. T. Gebhart, D. Sabin, Miss Ella McCoy, D. B. Fairley and wife, Ben Jackson and wife, C. Corman and wife, E. P. Wheeler and wife, W. D. Fairfax and wife, E. S. Bumstead and wife, L. C. McCreery and wife, L. L. Rice and wife. Before departing the company presented Mr. and Mrs. Richards with a handsome silver cake basket as a token of their best wishes, and all went home feeling the better for having spent so pleasant an evening.

At the Congregational church Rev. James H. Gregg will preach morning and evening. In the morning the subject will be "The Best Christmas Gift." In the evening there will be a service called Christmas with the Poets, in which interspersed with comments the following poems will be read: "It was the Calm and Silent Night," by Alfred Dornmett; "A Christmas Carol," by Chas. Kingsley; "A Christmas Symphony," by Helen Hunt Jackson; "Christmas Day," by George Wither; "His Name," by Wm. Alexander; "A Christmas Song," by Phoebe Cary; "A Christmas Carmen," by Whittier.

The explosion of a lamp in room 318 at The Antlers last night caused considerable of an alarm, which brought out the department. So promptly did the members act that the hose carts were out about the time that the bell sounded, and the hook and ladder company followed close in their wake. The occupants of the room showed the utmost self possession and extinguished the flames with pitchers taken from the bed before there was any necessity of turning on water. The flames could have gained but little headway, however, as the hose had already been laid from the standpipes in the house to the door of the room.

The seventh annual convention of the State Teachers' association of Colorado will meet in Denver on next Thursday afternoon and remain in session three days. The programme, which has already been published in the GAZETTE, will be an exceptionally interesting one. On Wednesday evening Rev. A. W. Arundel of this city will deliver a lecture. We understand that a majority of the teachers in the El Paso county schools contemplate attending the convention, and in order to procure reduced rates on the railroads they will have to apply to Mr. B. A. P. Eaton, county superintendent of schools, for certificates on or before Tuesday morning.

The occupants of Cascade Terrace held a Christmas tree at cottage No. 1, occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Burns. Seven states were represented and twenty four living in the West Wales. They first listened to a recitation by Miss Zella Ericson, after which the distribution of presents took place. Every man, woman and child received some token of friendship. Then refreshments were served. The company present were as follows: Mrs. Lucy Wright, Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Bennett, Master Clarence Bennett, Mr. and Mrs. Churchill, Charles and Mamie Churchill, Mr. and Mrs. Warner, Mrs. Irvine, Miss Marie Irvine, Mr. and Mrs. Burns, Master Willie and Bertie Burns, Mr. and Mrs. Ericson, Miss Zella Ericson, Mrs. Crongdale, Dora Crongdale and Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Fairfax.

There was one of the largest crowds at the [illegible] last night that assembled there this season, the occasion being the second masquerade carnival given under the management of Mr. McCreery. The floor was well covered, and many rich and unique costumes were noticed. A number of prizes were distributed. Mrs. O. C. Wellington received the prize for the finest lady's costume and Mr. C. L. Gardner the prize for the handsomest gentleman's costume. The feature of the evening was the one-mile race for a gold badge in which much interest seemed to be manifested. There were three entries: Johnson, Russell and Basham. The race was a very exciting one, and was won by Nels Johnson by a scratch. It seemed to be the general impression that the judges made a mistake in rendering any decision at all, on account of the fouls made. The badge is open to competition, and we understand that another race is being arranged for. In the bicycle race, with three entries, which concluded the evening's entertainment, C. D. Wilson came in first and Harry Hudson second.

CHRISTMAS FESTIVAL

At Grace Episcopal Church Last Night.

Regardless of the stormy and disagreeable weather last night Grace Episcopal church was well crowded, the occasion being the children's annual Christmas festival. The church had been tastefully decorated and presented a cheerful Christmas like appearance. Immediately in front of the chancel was a large Christmas tree handsomely lighted, and the limbs were well weighed down with presents. The exercises began at 7 o'clock, opening with a carol "Three Kings of Orient," and the balance of the programme was as follows: Prayer; psalter; Gloria in Excelsis; apostles' creed; lesson; recitation; catechism; carol, "Hark! A Burst of Heavenly Music;" recitations, class selections; chorus, "The Shepherds;" short address by the rector Rev. A. L. Kieffer; carol, "The Christmas Tree." The gifts were then gathered from the Christmas tree and distributed among the one hundred little children by Rev. Mr. Kieffer, G. E. Buckman, Charles Burkee and Mr. W. B. Gaskill. Many of the presents were very valuable and all went home well satisfied after the benediction had been pronounced by the rector.

The Electric Light company had an important meeting on Saturday evening and the prospects are that they will shortly go ahead with the plant. They have not as yet decided as to what system of electric light they will use.

M. B. Curtis, Annie Pixley, Lily Scan and Cou Cocks have cancelled their dates at the opera house. Manager Nye has, however, already filled two of the dates thus made vacant, one with Lou Morrison and the other with Chanfrau.

A number of the El Paso county teachers will start for Denver this morning to attend the seventh annual session of the State Teachers' association. They can obtain certificates from Mr. B. A. P. Eaton entitling them to reduced railroad rates.

Several of the Pueblo people who witnessed the production of the "Mikado" in this city on Christmas day were so extremely well pleased with it that they are making efforts to have the same opera presented by local talent there. The same costumes will be used as here and some of our local singers may take part.

Mr. Charles T. Parsons, for a number of years Colorado agent of the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe, and for nearly a year a resident of Colorado Springs, left last night for Los Angeles, Cal., where he has been offered a responsible position with the A., T. & S. Miss Corey is a sister of the wife of Rev. Mr. Gage of Pueblo. She will return to the chosen field of her labor in a short time, and will be accompanied by Miss Smith of Denver. The publishers spare no pains to provide the best and most attractive reading and illustrations. The serial and short stories have strong dramatic interest while they are wholly free from whatever is pernicious or vulgarly sensational; the papers on natural history, on science, travel, and the facts of life, are by writers whose names give the best assurance of accuracy and value. The illustrated papers on athletic sports, games and pastimes give full information on these subjects. There is nothing cheap about it but its price.
